Doctors Draft Plan to Rival GHA, Refute Trust Charge

AMA Sees Effort At Regimentation

Co-operative Group Adds 2 to Staff, Spurs Hospital Drive.

The District Medical Society is preparing a program of its own for medical care in the city to answer Justice Department charges it has violated antitrust laws in opposing the Group Health Association, it was learned last night.

Other developments following announcement of a grand jury inquiry into District Medical Society and American Medical Association activity the Justice Department contends is an illegal attempt to create a monopoly were:

The American Medical Association said "it remains to be determined whether or not the Federal Administration can use the laws and the courts to mold the people of the United States to its beliefs in every phase of life and living."

The Group Health Association added two more doctors to its staff and said a campaign to raise money for its own hospital was continuing.

Officials of the medical society carefully guarded details of their health program last night. They unanimously refused comment also on all matters pertaining to the proposed grand jury investigation

Deny "Obstructionism."

There were, however, indications that the period of the society's direct opposition to G. H. A. was ended. "To say that we are going to fight the grand jury investigation gives the wrong impression. We are not going to be obstructionists either to the investigation or the G. H. A. But later we are going to have something of our own to offer," said a spokesman for the physicians.

Tone of the American Medical Association was more truculent. The Associated Press reported the Association's Journal will this eek publish an editorial "The Department of Justice Intervenes in Medical Care."

In referring to the grand jury investigation announcement by Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of antitrust prosecutions, the editorial will say:

"This is the third statement issued to the pres by the Assistant Attorney General as to the intentions of the Department of Justice in this regard.

Sees Offer of Compromise.

"In the statement to the press, the Assistant Attorney General apparently offers to the American Medical Association and to others concerned an opportunity to avoid trial by agreeing to consent decrees which will assure the co-operation of the medical association in the operation of co-operative clinics.

"It becomes apparent that the Department of Justice feels that organized medicine should have nothing to say about methods of payment for medical services; it is even proposed that hospitals shall have nothing to say as to who may or may not practice within their walls. The statement by the Assistant Attorney General is in accord with the point of view which he has held for some time in relatoinship to our Government . . .

"Until the courts have spoken, physicians need have no fear as to the legality of the service which they render or as to the place which the American Medical Association occupies in our national economy."

Arnold accused the two medical societies of antitrust law violations by attempting to prevent the G. H. A. from functioning by threat-

Crump Judge Enjoins Troops From Memphis

Boss' Second Cousin Issues Order as Gov. Browning Addresses Cheering Throng in City, Threatens to Contest Election Result.

By Sidney Olson.
A Staff Correspondent

Memphis, Aug. 1.—The bitterest of the Nation's primary election campaigns roared toward the Thursday ballot boxes in a welter of oratory, legal maneuvers and threats here tonight.

1. Gov. Gordon Browning, out to smash the Crump-McKellar machine which has dominated State politics for 30 years, apparently abandoned tonight all plans to call out the National Guard "to preserve order in Shelby County."

OLSON.

2. Browning threatened to contest any result here in Shelby County, which embraces Memphis, that doesn't give him at least 25,000 votes.

3. Federal Judge John D. Martin, second cousin of Ed Crump, Memphis big boss since 1909, peremptorily cut off pleas by Crump lawyers for an injunction against Browning's use of the National Guard by granting the injunction in a blistering statement which urged Deputy Marshall Charles Miles to swear in all the deputies and good citizens needed to block entry of the guardsmen into Shelby County.

4. Browning's speech here tonight at the fair grounds, where more than 10,000 cheering anti-Crump citizens massed, passed off peacefully under the watchful eyes of 250 blue-shirted policemen, casually twirling brand new second-growth hickory night sticks.

Browning, perspiring smartly under the glare of flood lights, was served with the injunction papers as he started his speech. In the course of his bellowed diatribe on "the Shelby Czar" he abruptly swerved from his prepared remarks to lash at the legal notice, yelling:

"It is silly and absurd to think a Federal judge can deter me from handling troops. (He's a two-bit judge," shouted a voice.)

"I'm chief executive of this State and I know my rights." ("You're Governor, too," shouted the voice.)

"But I'm marching with ballots—I'm marching to the Shelby County

Senate Committee Asks in Vain for Candidates' Expense Reports.

By William V. Nessly.

Amid angry charges of irregularities, warnings of prosecution and bitter denunciation of tactics pursued, four States prepared to cast nominating ballots in primary elections today.

Despite urgent calls for the data, six Senate candidates had failed last night to report to the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee here the totals of their campaign contributions and expenditures, which the committee had intended to publish "so the voters may know before they go to the polls."

At the same time Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, committee chairman, served notice on candidates and public officials alike that all cases of violations of laws covering political coercion of Government employes and others would be sent to the Department of Justice for prosecution.

Four States Vote Today.

States voting today are:

MISSOURI—Senate and House nominees to be chosen. Senator Bennett Clark seeks a renomination victory that would place him high on the list of 1940 Presidential possibilities.

VIRGINIA—House candidates to be voted on. Representative Howard W. Smith, conservative Democrat, opposed in the Eighth District by William E. Dodd, jr., New Dealer.

KANSAS—Senate, House and gubernatorial contests. Feature is fight of Republican leaders to prevent Senate nomination going to the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, accused of fostering religious and racial intolerance.

Jury Indicts Six U. S. Agents And 97 Others in Liquor Ring

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, August 1.—Six New York policemen and six Treasury Department agents were named today among 103 defendants indicted by a Federal grand jury for conspiracy to defraud the United States Government in the operation of a huge bootleg alcohol ring.

The largest group ever indicted in a criminal proceeding in New York City, the defendants included drug store and "speakeasy" proprietors, chemists and extract manufacturers who purchased the illegitimate spirits; wholesalers, distributors and commission men who sold it, and informers and extortionists who preyed upon both seller and purchaser in the clandestine traffic.

In more than four years of operation in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens, the Bronx and northern New Jersey the ring was estimated by W. Mahlon Dickerson, assistant United States district attorney, to have defrauded the Federal Government of $1,800,000 in taxes, while others estimated the loss to New York State at $900,000.

The six indicted policemen, including one sergeant, were stripped of their shields and service revolvers at police headquarters. One of the accused, Patrolman Frank C. Smith, collapsed in hysteria and was removed to Bellevue. The others appeared later before Federal Judge T. Whitfield Davidson and were released in $1,000 bail each.

Police Commissioner Valentine said he expected one or two additional members of the department would be involved. It was learned from other sources that 10 or 12 additional members of the force,

Dodd Relies On New Deal In Poll Today

Primary Race Against Rep. Smith Commands National Interest.

By Edward T. Folliard

Watched by the politically minded all over the Nation, the voters of nearby Virginia go to the polls today to nominate a Democrat for the House of Representatives. That means, in effect, that they will elect him, for in the Eighth Virginia District the Republican nominee merely goes out for the ride.

A record-breaking primary vote is predicted, notwithstanding Weather Bureau forecasts of "local showers."

The voters will choose between a "yes" man and a "yes, but" man; between a young man who promises to support President Roosevelt at "all times" and a veteran politician who asks the right to exercise his "best judgment" on the President's program.

Smith Fought Wage Bill.

The two men, who have waged the most furious primary campaign nearby Virginia has seen in a half century, are:

William E. Dodd, jr., 32, of Round Hill, Loudoun County, son of the former Ambassador to Germany, an alumnus of the University of Chicago and Harvard University, who, until recently, was teaching history at the College of William and Mary. His slogan is "A Vote for Dodd Is a Vote for Roosevelt."

Representative Howard Worth Smith, 55, of Alexandria, a former Virginia circuit judge, now serving his fourth term in the House. As a member of the House Rules Committee, he infuriated the New Dealers by trying to block a vote on the wages and hours bill. Three months ago word went out that he was on the New Deal "purge" list.

Ickes in Battle.

The bombshell of the campaign was Secretary of Interior Ickes' attack on Smith last Thursday. Ickes charged that Smith, after obstructing every PWA bill, was trying to "muscle in" and get undeserved credit for PWA grants in his district.

Smith struck back by calling Ickes a political adventurer, a man who "muscled in" on the Republican Party, the Bull Moose Party and the Democratic Party. He said that Ickes helped to "ruin" the first two and was now trying to "ruin" the Democratic Party.

Postmaster General James A. Farley posed for a picture with young Dodd, and Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant to the Attorney General, spoke at a rally for him in Alexandria. Robert Anderson, Special Assistant to the Attorney General, has been Dodd's campaign manager.

Dodd in Radio Talk.

Dodd took to the radio again last night and answered Judge Smith's challenge that he give his voting record.

Inquiry Told TVA Made $60 on Its 'Perfect Jackass'

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 1 (AP).—Congressional investigators of the Tennessee Valley Authority today heard testimony on the cost of a "perfect jackass."

John B. Blandford, jr., TVA general manager, under cross-examination by Representative Charles Wolverton (Republican), of New Jersey, was asked about the TVA's purchase of a jackass which Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, recently said cost the authority about $2,500.

"What is the truth of the jackass incident?" asked Wolverton.

Blandford said the authority, for "training purposes," purchased the animal for $290 and sold him for $350, making a $60 profit.

Shirley Temple's Temperature Gone

Boston, Aug. 1 (AP).—Shirley Temple will lie abed all tomorrow despite the fact her temperature is down to normal, her mother decided tonight, and her vacation plans still are undecided.

Meanwhile the curly-topped, 9-year-old screen star had plenty to do. Today she listened to the radio, read a book, colored with her crayons and listened to a serenade by six Indians from a visiting rodeo.

Iowa Defies U.S. in Labor Board Clash

Martial Law Extended to Entire State in Maytag Case.

Board Accepts Closing of Hearing to Delay 'Showdown.'

By the Associated Press.

Newton Iowa, Aug. 1.—Arbitrary closing of a National Labor Relations Board hearing into the Maytag strike controversy here the Iowa National Guard tonight threatened to precipitate a clash between Federal and State authorities.

Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel, as commander in chief of the Iowa National Guard on strike duty here, ordered the troops to close the hearing when it convened at 10 a. m. today.

Madison Hill, NLRB trial examiner, acting on advice of his Washington headquarters, accepted service of the military's order and declared the inquiry was in recess for 48 hours—until 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Whole State Involved.

At Washington, NLRB spokesmen, however, declared the recess was "in no sense recognition of the validity of the Governor's order."

In Des Moines, Gov. Kraschel retorted, "You can tell the cockeyed world that there will be no Labor Relations Board hearing in the military district of Iowa."

The Governor previously expanded the district of military law, in the NLRB's case, to include the entire State.

The Governor gave as his principal reason for closing the hearing the fact that he thought it was a "disturbing influence" to both sides interfering with possible settlement of the strike.

U. S. Property Inviolate.

Tonight the issue of whether State troops, in the form of National Guardsmen, had the right to interfere with a Federal agency, drew comment from U. S. Army officials at Omaha, who declared such interference was illegal.

Their comment included the statement that the NLRB might possibly hold its hearings at the Newton postoffice, which, as Federal property, would be inviolate in their opinion.

Adjt. Gen. Charles Grahl, of the Iowa National Guard, agreed with the Army spokesmen's opinion that Federal property in the martial law area could not be invaded by State troops.

Guard Officers Silent.

Both company and union representatives expressed approval of the Governor's action in closing the hearing.

Hill convened the hearing here July 18. It is into charges of unfair labor practices brought against the Maytag Washing Machine Co. by the striking C. I. O. union.

National Guard officers refused to comment on what action they might take if Hill insists on convening the hearing again Wednesday morning in the face of the Governor's order.

The strike began 12 weeks ago when C. I. O. workers walked out of the plant in protest to a 10 per cent wage cut.

Sharks Despoil Roosevelt Party Of Their Fishes

Aboard U. S. S. Houston, Cocos Island, Aug. 1 (AP) (via Naval Radio).—Members of President Roosevelt's fishing party returned aboard tonight blaming sharks for their failure to catch fish in greater numbers.

The party put out this morning, but reported on their return that time after time, when game fish were hooked, only their heads were pulled in.

The President took his small boat well out to the windward side of the island, though other members of the group elected to stay in the more calm waters on the sheltered side. When the catch was weighed and counted, honors for the biggest fish and the most fish went to the President and his boat.

The battle between fishermen, fish and shark will be resumed tomorrow and possibly Wednesday forenoon. The Houston will proceed to Balboa, Canal Zone, at 2 p. m. Wednesday, and is scheduled to arrive there Thursday afternoon.

Hughes and His Crew Feted at Los Angeles

Court to Get Earle Graft Stories First

Grand Jury Witnesses Can't Talk to Legislature Until Then.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 1.—Judge Paul N. Schaeffer denied the Pennsylvania Legislature today the right to suspend a grand jury investigation of charges against Gov. George H. Earle and other Democratic leaders.

Judge Schaeffer upheld the General Assembly's authority to conduct its own investigation—but said it should not interfere with the court inquiry starting here next Monday.

The Reading jurist, assigned to the grand jury by the State Supreme Court, impounded all evidence in possession of District Attorney Carl B. Shelley. He ordered Shelley and witnesses under subpena for the grand jury not to appear before the Legislature until after the court investigation.

Gov. Earle and advisers, who last week pushed through legislation designed to checkmate the grand jury and permit the Legislature to take over the inquiry, were silent on plans for any counterattack.

The Legislature reconvenes tomorrow with provision for a House committee of five Democrats and two Republicans to begin an investigation immediately.

Among the first witnesses scheduled to be heard were Shelley and former Attorney General Charles

Bribe Exacted To Keep Steel Police Secrets

Republic Chief Admits Paying 'Blackmail' to Avoid Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Civil Liberties Committee received testimony yesterday that volunteer policemen equipped with tear gas, billies and baseball bats purchased by the Republic Steel Corporatoin dispersed pickets outside the Monroe, Mich., plant of the company.

In the weeks following, nervous at reports that C. I. O. men in other cities intended to invade Monroe, James S. Torbic, Republic's police chief there, received "undercover information" from a mysterious "Jack Smith" and ultimately paid him $1,000 lest, he said, the man sue him and the Senate committee learn that such tactics were being used.

"As I thought it out later," said Torbic, "I think he just plain blackmailed me."

The day's evidence was presented by a score of witnesses, ranging from Monroe's Mayor, Daniel Knaggs, who told of his dealings with Republic for the purchase of antistrike munitions, to a group of steel workers, some still employed by the plant there and others now on WPA.

A tense moment was reached with testimony by Leonides McDonald, C. I. O. organizer, that a mob beat him to unconsciousness on the streets of Monroe and forced him out of town. He identified Charles Strohm as one of his assailants, and Strohm, a red-faced mild-mannered little man, made an indignant protest.

Strohm told the committee that McDonald never saw him until Dominic Mather, another C. I. O. organizer, pointed him out a few days ago in the hearing room. Mather was called to the stand and acknowledged that McDonald had asked him to identify Strohm.

Questioning developed that Strohm was in the vicinity of the

Harlan Jurors Fail to Agree; Retrial Sought

By the United Press.

London, Ky., Aug. 1.—A jury of smalltown tradesmen and farmers reported they were unable to agree in the Government's long drawnout Harlan coal conspiracy case today and Judge H. Church Ford declared a mistrial.

The jurors had deliberated ten hours. They received the case Saturday.

The trial started May 16 and required 11 weeks of testimony and argument. Estimated cost to both sides was $350,000.

The Government charged 55 defendant coal corporations, company officials and former Harlan County deputy sheriffs with conspiring to defeat the Wagner Labor Relations Act and creating a reign of terror in "bloody Harlan" County.

Government attorneys asked immediately that a new trial be started within two weeks. Judge Ford refused to agree and set September 17 for a hearing at Lexington, Ky., to determine when retrial will begin.

Assistant U. S. Attorney General Brien McMahon, in asking for an immediate retrial, told Judge Ford the Government could be ready for trial "in the morning if necessary."

"The eyes of the Nation are upon this case and are waiting for the issue to be settled," he argued.

Professor Vanishes Off Liner After Fight With Wife on Deck

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 1.—Robert Moore Duncan, 35, professor of political science at Colgate University, Hamilton, N. Y., disappeared at sea from the French liner Normandie Sunday night, ship's officers reported today when the liner docked here. His wife, Alice, 36, was in the ship's hospital suffering cuts and bruises on her head and face.

DUNCAN.

The Normandie's chief purser, Henry Villar, said Mrs. Duncan, who was not allowed to see visitors on her arrival, could not explain her husband's actions.

"Just before midnight," Villar said, "Mr. and Mrs. Duncan were walking on the boat deck on the starboard side. At a point just beneath the bridge they stopped and began an argument.

"Duncan grabbed his wife by the throat and hit her several times over the head," the purser continued, "and attempted to throw her over the side."

The purser said Joseph Marie Brouard, a seaman on duty on the bridge, heard the argument and interfered in time to tear Mrs. Duncan away from her husband.

"Brouard carried her to a companionway, put her down and then went back to see about Duncan," Villar said, "but the man had disappeared.

"When Mrs. Duncan was revived the first thing she said was, 'Get my husband. He is going to commit suicide.'

Soviet Warns Japan to Quit Border After Fight for Hill

Russia Threatens 'Grave' Possibility

Nipponese Meet Reds' Victory Assertions With Raid Story.

By the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 1.—Russia tonight warned Japan that "possible gravest consequences" would follow further violation of the disputed Manchukuan-Siberian frontier, while announcing Russian troops had recaptured strategic Changkufeng Hill from Japanese "usurpers."

[The Japanese foreign office announced Tuesday morning (August 2) that three Soviet bombers attacked the hill at 4 a. m., further aggravating tension which already has Japan and Russia nearer war than any time since 1905.

[Soviet assertions that Red army troops had recaptured Changkufeng and ejected Japanese forces from the area were emphatically denied.]

A three-hour battle Sunday in which 400 Japanese were killed and wounded ended with the Russians regaining the hill, the Soviet communique said. Soviet losses were placed at 13 killed and 55 wounded.

The announcement indicated the battle around Changkufeng Hill, claimed both by Japan and Russia, continued today—the twenty-fourth anniversary of Russia's embroilment in the World War.

Soviet Planes Downed.

Headquarters of the Japanese Korean army, in Seoul, announced earlier 5 of a fleet of 50 Soviet planes which bombed and machine-gunned Korean villages and railway junctions in the Possiet Bay area were shot down; that Japanese forces continued to hold Changkufeng Hill and adjacent areas taken from the Russians in a bloody week-end battle and that Japanese everywhere were holding hard-won positions.

"The Soviet charge d'affaires in Tokyo has been instructed to lodge with the Japanese government an energetic protest," the official Soviet News Agency Tass stated, "and to draw its attention to the possible gravest consequences of the actions of Japanese militarists not wishing to respect the inviolability of Soviet territory, the frontier of which was established by Russo-Chinese treaties and clearly marked on maps annexed to those treaties and bearing the signatures of China's representatives."

Border Situation Vague.

Both the fighting and the language of the diplomatic protest were the most serious of the long series of border clashes and disputes between the two powers.

The announcement was vague on the present situation in the area of hostilities, except to say Russian troops expelled the Japanese "invaders," but left the impression fighting still was in progress.

The Soviet News Agency stated: "After a Japanese detachment on July 29 was dislodged from Changkufeng Hill, which it had seized, the Japanese concentrated troops up to one division in strength in front of the hill, located in Soviet territory.

Say Japan Used Artillery.

"On the night of July 31 at 3 o'clock Japanese troops, under the cover of artillery fire, suddenly attacked the Soviet frontier outpost and pushed it back from the hill. Simultaneously Japanese artillery started shelling the neighborhood heights and a country road passing behind them in order to hinder the arrival of Soviet reinforcements.

"With the assistance of artillery, Japanese infantry succeeded in advancing four kilometers (about two miles) into Soviet territory.

"Several hours later Soviet regular troops which had arrived forced the Japanese out of Soviet

Frank Terms 'Practicality' New Deal Test

Bans 'Label' in Proceedings of G. O. P. Policy Committee.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Giving a clew to the specific approach the Republican program committee has adopted in its task of drafting a platform for the Republican Party to use in the 1940 Presidential campaign, Dr. Glenn Frank, committee chairman, said today that workability and practicality were the supreme tests for New Deal measures and for any reforms proposed to supplant them.

"The fight today is not one between old age and youth, between liberals and conservatives, or between reactionaries and radicals. The contest is between workable and unworkable political policy, between realism and muddling," Dr. Frank declared at the first luncheon meeting of the program committee's "summer school."

Bans Use of Labels.

As proof that he was making an effort to substitute objective appraisal for emotional, political name-calling, Dr. Frank revealed that he had banned from use by the chairmen of the regional subcommittees such "meaningless political labels" as "liberal, conservative, radical, reactionary, totalitarian, alien, regimentation, and dictatorship" in discussing national problems.

At a closed executive committee meeting, Frank outlined the work for coming months.

Later at a luncheon at the Lake Shore Athletic Club, a silvered streamlined statue of an elephant, represented as striding purposefully forward with trunk uplifted, was adopted informally as a new emblem for the Republican party.

William Hard, secretary of the program committee, presented the streamlined elephant to John D. M. Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

Round Table Talks.

Addressing the luncheon meeting, Chairman Hamilton said he had refrained from interfering in any way with the business of the program committee during the past five months because he wished it to continue to function non-politically, "in the sense that it is not looking for political expedients."

The committee attended two round-table discussions, on "basis of a sound and enlightened labor policy for the United States," and on agricultural problems.

The round-table discussions were closed to the public. A similar public meeting was addressed tonight by J. S. Davis, Leland Stanford University agricultural expert. A second speaker was John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries of Minneapolis.

Child Finds Note Signed 'Corrigan' In Bottle at Sea

St. Andrews, N. B., Aug. 1 (Canadian Press).—While playing on the beach here Nancy Chandler, 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Chandler, North Attleboro, Mass., picked up a floating bottle containing the following undated note:

"Flying 6,000 feet above Nova Scotia. Tail wind taking me about 120 miles per hour. Should sight Ireland about 5 a. m. tomorrow at that rate. Corrigan."

Douglas Corrigan, who landed at Dublin July 18 after a nonstop flight from New York, said he had thought he was flying toward California.

Hazen Puts Stamp Of Approval Upon Corrigan Welcome

Commissioner Hazen yesterday approved plans for the reception of Douglas Corrigan, as Fairfax Naulty chairman of the reception committee, stated that the celebration next Monday will be national rather than local in character.

Following a meeting in the Commissioner's office, Naulty emphasized that the reception is to be "dignified."

"It was suggested that we have a brass band on a truck leading the parade," he said, "but I vetoed it. We want to keep this dignified."

One Felled; Heat, Humidity to Stay

High temperatures and accompanying humidity which caused one heat prostratoin yesterday will continue today, according to the Weather Bureau. The forecast indicates cloudy skies and probably local showers.

The thermometer reached a peak of 91 degrees at 3:45 p. m. yesterday, prostrating William J. Proctor, colored, 40, of 2931 Stanton road southeast. Proctor, a Capital Transit Co. employe, was working on removal of street car tracks in the 1300 block of E street northwest. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

The day's lowest temperature was 75 degrees at 6 a. m. The Weather Bureau reported above-normal humidity.

Short Ballot for Virginia Primary

Sample Ballot

Democratic Primary

Tuesday, August 2, 1938

For House of Representatives

☐ HOWARD W. SMITH

☐ WILLIAM E. DODD, JR.

(One To Be Voted For)

25

Dodd

in Virginia," Dodd said. "The answer is emphatically yes. In 1928 I voted for Alfred Emanuel Smith, and for this I ask forgiveness. I have been told that Mr. Smith was one of those who voted for Herbert Hoover. In 1932 I voted for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"In 1934, while there was no Congressional contest on, I took the trouble to vote for Congressman Howard Smith. Again may I be forgiven. Like Al Smith, he has changed considerably."

Mr. Dodd then explained that in 1936 he was in Berlin serving as secretary to his father, then Ambassador to Germany. The ballots, he said, were not printed sufficiently in advance for them to be mailed back and forth.

Mr. Dodd reminded Smith that Thomas Jefferson was 32 when he wrote the Declaration of Independence.

"Because I am also 32 I do not claim the powers of Jefferson," he said. "But I think that even Mr. Smith can see the point. I claim to be qualified for the office I seek because I have been able to comprehend the world in which we live and to understand what must be done to assure that America will not be returned to those few greedy men who owned it prior to 1932."

Dodd assailed Smith for leading the fight to jam through legislation to locate the Thomas Jefferson Memorial in the Tidal Basin area. Millions of Americans and a majority of Virginians in the Eighth District, he said, would have preferred a living memorial in the form of a school of government at the University of Virginia.

Referring to Smith's attack on Secretary Ickes, Dodd said:

"No one need to defend the reputation for fairness and integrity of the man who has spent $5,000,000,000 of the people's money without a breath of scandal.

"Congressman Smith is allied—and throughout the last session of Congress has been allied—with the arch reactionary Republicans, the worst elements in American political life."

E. C. Davison, general secretary of the International Association of Machinists and former Mayor of Alexandria, called on organized labor in the district to vote for Dodd.

"The attacks made by Congressman Smith on labor leaders in the Eighth Virginia District," he said, "are in line with the program of seeking to destroy the effectiveness of the Roosevelt Administration. The constant reference of Congressman Smith to the agitations of the C. I. O. in the Eight District and his attempt to couple the wage earners of the Eight District to the C. I. O. program are an insult to the intelligence of the voters of the Eighth District.

Representative Smith gave his rival the silent treatment yesterday, contenting himself with merely making public two telegrams from two New Deal members of the House—Representative Jerry Voorhees and Byron Scott, both of California. The Dodd camp had said these two members had turned over their offices to Dodd workers for the campaign. Smith asked them about it.

"My office in the House Office Building," Voorhees wired him, "is being cared for by young Californian, studying and working in Washington. Have not turned my office over to anybody nor authorized use of my name in connection with any campaign excepting own."

Representative Scott telegraphed: "Was being done without my knowledge. Am ordering office closed. Sorry."

Hamilton in Fight Too.

With one exception, Representative Smith is the only member of the Virginia delegation in the House who has opposition. The exception is Representative Norman R. Hamilton, of Portsmouth, in the Second District. He is opposed by former Representative Colgate W. Darden and W. Bruce Shafer.

The New Deal issue has been brought into the fight by supporters of Hamilton, who charge that Darden is a member of the "Byrd machine" and would be unfriendly to the New Deal. Hamilton was elected as a New Dealer against Darden two years ago.

Shafer, who says he originated the soldiers' bonus, has charged that both Hamilton and Darden are "economic royalists."

Dr. Funk, Famed Lexicographer, Compiles Canine Vocabulary; of Course, the Pup Isn't Expected to Say 'Em, Just Recognize 'Em.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Southampton, Long Island, Aug. 1.—Wilfred J. Funk, who, as editor of Funk & Wagnalls, defines words for human beings, made public yesterday a dog dictionary of 204 words which he called "a sample potential recognition vocabulary of a pet dog." He explained the list, which he compiled after considerable research, was composed of words which could be understood by an unusually bright pooch accustomed to human society. This is the list:

Back, bad, balance, ball, bark, barking, basket, bath, be, bed, bag, beg, bone, box, boy, bow, bring, brushed, bury, can, candy, car, carry, cat, catch, chair, chase, climb, close, collar, come, coming, cover, crawl, cross, corner, daddy, dead, dig, dinner, dog, doggie, door, down, downstairs, drink, drop, easy, eat, enough, eyes, fast, feet, fetch, food, from, front, get, give, go, going, gone, good, goodbye, glad, grin, hand, hang, have, head, heel, here, hide, hold, home, hoop, howl, hush, hurry, I, ice cream, is, it, jump, keys, kiss, kitchen, kitty, lay, leave, left, legs, lie, listen, liver, loud, louder, mail, make, me, meat, mouse, my, naughty, nice, no, not, now, off, on, open, other, out, outdoors, over, package, paper, paw, pick, place, play, poor, porch, pray, prayers, pull, put, quick, quiet, raise, ride, right, roll, rope, room, round, run, say, scratch, see, shake, shame, show, siccum, side, sing, sit, slippers, smile, sniff, so, some, someone, speak, squat, stand, stay, stick, still, stop, store, stretch, tail, take, talk, teeth, that, the, there, this, three, through, time, to, top, tub, tumble, up, upstairs, wag, wait, walk, want, watch, water, way, where, wipe, work, yard, yawn, yes, you, your.

Inquiry Shows Defrauding of Customers Through Fine Promises.

Executives of seven of the country's leading commodity exchanges were urged yesterday by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to take "vigorous action" to limit the operations of "certain types of commodity counselors," who have defrauded customers "through promises of extraordinary profits from dealings on the commodity exchanges."

The conference, first of its kind held in Washington, was called as a result of an investigation which the Commodity Exchange Administration conducted last year.

Don't Share Losses.

In the absence of Secretary Wallace, Harry L. Brown, Assistant Secretary, presided and laid before the conferees the Secretary's recommendation for "vigorous action."

The commodity exchange investigation revealed that "of the 4,488 accounts controlled by persons other than the owner, approximately 600 are managed by so-called commodity counselors or tipsters."

"Commodity counselors have been instrumental in bringing into the futures markets persons of limited financial means who are unable to assume large risks and ordinarily do not speculate in commodities," the investigation shows. "Usually the commodity counselors' remuneration is provided for in an agreement by which they share the profits but not the losses with the client. All of the 16 counselors who controlled 10 or more accounts each during the first eight months of 1937, lost money for a considerable percentage of their clients."

Remedy Proposed.

Robert J. Murray, president of the New York Wool Top Exchange and member of the Cotton Exchange, supported by Frank J. Knell, president of the New York Cotton Exchange, suggested that all accounts should be "made up," that is, that no account be left with opposite positions in the same future.

"This proposal," the announcement said, "would put a stop to the practice which a few of the less scrupulous operators follow of keeping unprofitable trades open so as to prevent the customer from learning that the transactions have resulted in losses."

Kenneth S. Templeton, president, and Winthrop Smith, chairman of the business conduct committee of the Chicago Board of Trade, proposed a rule requiring that all persons whose accounts are operated on a discretionary basis be furnished by the commission house with a monthly statement showing the liquidating profit or loss in the account, that is, the net profit or loss which would result if all open trades were closed at the market.

44 Ships Fly Nonstop, Seattle to San Diego

In announcing the 1,400-mile trip Naval officials said the aircraft, commanded by Capt. Alva D. Bernhard, chief of staff of the commander of Scouting Force Aircraft, were returning to the southern California base after summer maneuvers in Alaskan waters.

Tardy Returns Swamp Offices Of Tax Assessor

Several Thousand Penalties Expected in Business, Property Levies.

The business privilege and personal property divisions of the tax assessor's office were cramped yesterday with thousands of last-minute returns that had been mailed before midnight Sunday to get under the deadline.

Accurate figures on the returns on hand and the number of delinquents were unavailable, but administrators predicted several thousand will have to pay the penalty for tardiness.

Allan F. Brooks, administrator of the business privilege tax, estimated 4,000 returns came in today's mail, bringing the total on hand to more than 16,000.

"This is about the number we had last year," he said, "but I believe we should have two or three thousand more because of the inclusion of income from real estate holdings in this year's tax act."

Licenses to do business have jumped from 37,000 to about 45,000, Brooke said, although approximately half of the licensees paid no fee because of the $2,000 primary exemption.

Charles A. Russell, deputy tax assessor, surveying last-minute personal property returns, refused to make an estimate of the number on hand.

"It's the largest number I've ever had, though," he said.

Both Brooke and Russell will need several weeks to get caught up with the late returns, after which they will turn their attention to delinquents.

Penalties of 10 per cent for the first month and 5 per cent for each additional month may be imposed under the business privilege tax, and 20 per cent under the personal property tax.

Playwright's Tale Good Enough to Cut Tax Penalty

By the Associated Press.

The Board of Tax Appeals yesterday agreed to settle for $432 its $500.85 claim against Zoe Akins Rumbold, Pasadena, Calif., creator of the play, "The Old Maid," for 1934 income tax penalties.

The authoress said in her petition she was too busy in 1934 to prepare her own return, so an accountant was hired. The accountant, she said, obtained an extension, then committed suicide.

Next, she was called to New York to aid in a rehearsal and from there to London, where the death of a favorite friend delayed preparation of her return.

Sen. Lewis Joins Fight on 3d Term

By the Associated Press.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, an Administration stalwart, said in an interview yesterday that an attempt by President Roosevelt to obtain a third term "would destroy the Democratic Party."

Lewis said the issue would split the Democratic Party into two parts in the South and New England, and would drive the new Western Democrats to the Socialist or Labor Party—or create a new democracy in the West, which would defeat the candidate of the convention and destroy the Democratic Party.

SEC Charges Alleghany Firm Filed False Report; Sets Inquiry

Rail Holding Company Minimized Losses, Overstated Profits, Says U.S.

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday it has "reasonable grounds to believe" the much-investigated Alleghany Corporation made "false and misleading" financial statements, and added formal inquiry would start August 11.

Specifically, the SEC declared that the corporation's "net loss for the years ended December 31, 1934, 1935 and 1936 is understated and the net profit for the year ended December 31, 1937, is overstated by approximately $27,000 in each year because of the failure to follow a periodic amortization plan in writing off bond discount and expenses."

The financial statements were filed with the commission in annual reports made in connection with registration of the company's $200,000,000 worth of securities traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

Smith W. Brookhart, SEC counsel in charge of the investigation, said there might be a second investigation to see whether the securities should be "delisted." The immediate inquiry will merely develop information.

The Alleghany Corporation figured largely in the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee investigation of the vast control of railroads which the late O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, of Cleveland, exercised a few years ago.

The company's last annual statement, filed December 31, 1937, showed that Robert Young, Allan Kirby and the George and Frances Ball Foundation owned 43.65 per cent of the voting stock.

In the years to be covered by the investigation the management changed, according to the SEC reports. In 1934 both O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen were members of the board. Only O. P. Van Sweringen was shown to be a member in the following year and both were out in 1936.

The commission contended that in the period covered the corporation charged to "capital surplus" $5,000,000 which probably should have been charged to "profit and loss or earned surplus."

The company was also accused of charging to "capital surplus" during the years 1931 to 1937 $23,000,000 of net losses on the sale of investments which should have been charged to "profit and loss or earned surplus."

Summing up, the commission said that as a result of this bookkeeping the "balance sheets at December 31, 1934, 1935 and 1936 show an earned surplus in the amount of approximately $2,000,000, and as at December 31, 1937, an earned surplus in the amount of approximately $12,000,000, instead of a deficit in the earned surplus account as at December 31, 1934, 1935 and 1936 of approximately $55,000,000 and as at December 31, 1937, of approximately $45,000,000."

Suspend Tobacco Quota, 2 Georgians Ask Wallace

Atlanta, Aug. 1 (AP).—Senator Walter F. George and Gov. E. D. Rivers today requested Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to suspend the tobacco marketing quota for the 1938 season in Georgia.

George urged Wallace to consider also a cotton loan of "75 per cent of parity price and the marketing of flue-cured tobacco from allotted acreage without penalties."

Ancient Tribes' Relics Saved at Norris Dam Site

Smithsonian Discloses Evidence of Prehistoric Races in Tennessee.

By the Associated Press.

The Smithsonian Institution disclosed yesterday remains of three prehistoric Indian races had been rescued from the area now covered by the lake behind Norris Dam in the Tennessee Valley.

Archeologists of the institution reported yesterday 23 sites showing definite evidence of prehistoric occupation were found. They included 20 earth mounds, nine stone mounds, four village sites and seven caves. The remains of 54 wooden structures, apparently built by two entirely different Indian tribes, were examined thoroughly.

One group was undoubtedly the "Over Hill Cherokee," a branch of the powerful Cherokee nation, which lived in other parts of the area, institution officials said. However, the archeological evidence indicated that their occupancy was very brief.

Prior to arrival of the Cherokees, ancient Creek and Yuchi Indians apparently lived in close harmony there.

These tribes, having entirely different languages and customs, were known to have lived peacefully together, and it is highly possible that they first formed their close friendship by living together in the Norris basin area at some time between the discovery of the New World by Europeans and the beginning of written records by the Indian tribes of the interior," Maj. Williams Webb, who directed the survey, declared.

Becomes Father 26th Time at 82

George Boarman, 82, became a father for the twenty-sixth time yesterday. The 8-pound boy was born at Providence Hospital Sunday to his third wife, who is 21 years old.

Boarman, night watchman for the Wilson Line, attributes his good fortune to the fact that he "stands in well with the Lord" because of his clean and honest life. Anyone can do the same thing, he believes, who abstains from drinking and smoking, works hard and is "kind to his fellow man."

The proud father had "18 or 20 brothers and sisters—I just don't remember how many now," and he long since has stopped counting his grandchildren.

Boarman met his present wife, the former Edith Williams, last year in Ryantown, Md., where her father is a farmer. He had known his future father-in-law for many years, he explained yesterday, but never saw Edith until he went to work for Williams as a hired hand.

"I didn't like to see her working in the fields, and so I got to courtin' her," he went on. The marriage took place last September, and they moved to Washington two months ago. They live at 1301 Fourth street southwest.

Boarman's first wife bore the first 25 of his children before her death. His second wife was childless.

After consulting with fellow-workers at the wharf, he has decided to call the new baby Herbert. Since "about two-thirds" of his other children also are boys, he had some difficulty in avoiding duplication. At Providence Hospital later, Mrs. Boatman smiled her approval of the name.

Boarman is proud of his record as a father. "Bet folks think I'm crackerjack, don't they?" he exclaimed, chuckling and slapping his thigh.

resentative Robert L. Ramsay for renomination.

Senate candidates who had failed up to last night to let the expenditures committee know how much money they had spent in their campaigns included Senator Clark and Young, Missouri Democrats; the Joseph T. Davis and Robert I. Rev. Mr. Winrod and Jess Clyde Fisher, Kansas Republicans, and Joe Dohner, Kansas Democrat.

Clark Preparing Report.

Senator Clark's campaign committee notified Sheppard yesterday it was preparing the funds statement and Dohner wired that he was mailing his reply to the committee questionnaire. Sheppard had been insistent that the replies be in before the primary voting "so the voters may be acquainted with the expenditures of the candidates."

Civil service and other laws pertaining to vote coercion will be enforced, Senator Sheppard said, pointing out that while the corrupt practices law does not apply to primary elections the other restrictive measures do.

Allegations and denials of WPA mixing in Missouri's campaign have marked the electioneering there, where the bitterest battle is over a state supreme court nomination. In that struggle Gov. Lloyd C. Stark has made the charges of coercion of WPA workers in favor of James V. Billings, Pendergast candidate for the judgeship against the governor's appointee, Judge James M. Douglas.

Hopkins Finds No Coercion.

Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins has declared he found "no evidence of coercion" but Stark replied he would call his evidence to the attention of President Roosevelt.

There is little doubt that if Senator Clark wins renomination by a commanding majority his stock will be boosted as a prospective "stop Roosevelt" leader among conservative Democrats at the party's 1940 convention, whether the President seeks a third term or only undertakes to name the party candidate to succeed him.

Clark, who has not always gone along with the Administration, is opposed by two ardent New Dealers, Willis H. Meredith, former speaker of the State House, and Joseph T. Davis, St. Louis attorney. Robert I. Young, St. Joseph farmer, is a late entry in the Democratic contest.

On the Republican ticket, former Gov. Henry S. Caulifield, with organization backing, is seeking the senatorial nomination. He is opposed by Ray E. White, of St. Louis County, politically unknown.

All 12 of Missouri's Democratic Representatives in Congress, and Dewey Short, the State's lone Republican member, are seeking renomination. Short and five of the Democrats have no opposition.

Junction with the furnace room tha

"Nazism" and "intolerance" were hurled at Evangelist Winrod by high members of his own party, including John D. M. Hamilton, national chairman, and William Allen White, Emporia, Kans., editor. Numerous Protestant ministers also have assailed him, but the race he has run has caused manifest concern among his foes.

Three New Deal Foes.

He is opposed for the Senate nomination by former Gov. Clyde M. Reed, Dallas W. Knapp and the Rev. J. C. Fisher, Methodist minister. All three have attacked the New Deal.

Senator George McGill, Democrat, is unopposed for renomination.

Gov. Walter A. Huxman, Democrat, also has no primary opposition, but the Republican governorship nomination is sought by four—former Representative Harold McGugin, State Senator Payne Ratner, former Lieut. Gov. Charles W. Thompson and Carl Newcomer, former State vehicle commissioner.

W. P. Lambertson, Republican, was the only one of the State's seven Representatives with opposition. His rival is James Kelsey, of Leavenworth.

The West Virginia Congressional contests are largely overshadowed by the State Legislature races. Ramsay, in the First District, is opposed by Frank C. Haymond, Fairmount attorney.

Representative Andrew Edmiston is opposed by J. Alfred Taylor in the Third District and Representative George W. Johnson is running against Edgar M. Utterback in the Fourth. The other three Representatives have no opposition. Republicans will nominate men to oppose them in each of the six districts.

Fund Reports Filed.

Meanwhile, other Senate candidates continued to file contribution and expenditure reports with the Sheppard committee.

Ohio continued at the top of the list in expenditures as Senator Robert J. Bulkley reported contributions of $20,691.90 and expenditures of $16,083.50 in his renomination race against former Gov. George White. White had reported contributions of only $700 and expenditures of only $879.86.

ening expulsion from the D. M. S. of doctors accepting employment with G. H. A. or who take part in consultations with G. H. A. staff doctors; and exclusion from Washington hospitals of G. H. A. staff doctors.

Meanwhile, the G. H. A. added to its staff Drs. Clarke P. Halstead and Charles J. Albright. Dr. Albright, a specialist in urology, is a member of the Tri-State Medical Society. Dr. Halstead, a graduate of George Washington University, has been an interne at Georgetown Hospital. He will perform interne duties at the G. H. A. clinic.

Reply of the District Medical Society is not expected until the next regular meeting, scheduled for October. No special meeting has yet been called.

Three Justice Department attorneys were preparing for the grand jury investigation, but it is not expected to be held for a month or two, department officials said yesterday.

Meanwhile, the proposed grand jury proceedings, expected to be of value as "precedent of far-reaching consequence on one of our most pressing problems" had reverberations throughout the rest of the country.

Dr. Rock Sleyster, Wauwatosa, Wisc., president-elect of the American Medical Association, characterized as "unfounded" Arnold's charges.

"The A. M. A. has the right," he said, "to enforce certain membership requirements and expel members who fail to comply . . .

"The charges of conspiracy to prevent doctors from practicing is ridiculous . . ."

Meanwhile, the Milwaukee Federated Trades Council said it would ask Arnold to extend the proposed investigation to that city.

In Boston Dr. Channing Frothingham, president of the Massachusetts Medical Society and one of the original 450 "rebels" in the A. M. A., said:

"Organized medicine is making an awful mistake by not following the trend of public opinion in medical and hospital insurance plans. The trouble is, doctors are independent fellows and they think their rights are being taken away. They can't see that they'll be benefited. I'm glad the whole thing is coming out in the open."

In Washington directors of hospitals from which G. H. A. doctors had been barred unanimously remained silent. Although hospitals were not named by Arnold in his statement, it was believed that boards of directors of hospitals would watch outcome of grand jury proceedings carefully.

The hospitals likewise remained silent to a recent letter from the G. H. A. asking if its doctors would be allowed to practice in the hospitals in view of a decision in District Court that the co-operative medical venture was operating legally.

Although District Attorney David A. Pine had sent to the Solicitor General of the Justice Department his recommendation on an appeal from Justice Jennings Bailey's decision, no decision had been made yesterday on the appeal.

Opinion of the G. H. A. on the grand jury investigation was reflected by William C. Kirkpatrick, president. He said:

"Whatever the legal outcome of this move on the part of the Department of Justice, it will undoubtedly have a salutary effect on the problem which brought group health into being—namely the providing of adequate medical care for the average man and woman within their means to pay."

Inquiry "Welcomed."

Lansing, Mich., Aug. 1 (AP).—The Michigan State Medical Society, in a statement issued at headquarters here today, "heartily" welcomed an investigation of "organized medicine" in hopes it would disprove "loose accusations" against the profession's "high morals and ethics."

Fishbein Denies Boycott.

Chicago, Aug. 1 (AP).—Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, asserted tonight the association, as a national body, had never boycotted co-operative health groups.

Local units of the organization, he added, may take any action they deem feasible.

The association, Fishbein said, "never opposed hospital insurance plans, but insisted on arrangements which would maintain the quality of professional service."

Unless there is a special call, trustees will not meet to consider action to be taken in view of the Justice Department's charges, Fishbein said. The next regular meeting of the board is scheduled for next month. Members of the association, which was founded in 1847, number 106,916 of the 169,628 physicians in the United States.

beating. He said it was "sort of a parade," and that he followed it to the city limits.

Mayor Knaggs readily testified that Republic bought the gas, billies and baseball bats for the city; that at the suggestion of Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan he deputized nearly 400 volunteers as special police, and that these dispersed the pickets.

Talking over the strike with Torbic, he said, he told the Republic official that he knew the city needed "munitions and men" but that its "funds were low" and he didn't know where the city would "get the money."

"He said," Knaggs continued, referring to Torbic, "'well, we'll furnish the money.' I said, 'If you do, we'll pay you back.' By the way, we never did pay them back."

Gave City Cash.

Subsequent testimony developed that Torbic contributed $1,566 in cash to the city's antistrike equipment. Of that sum, $1,277 went for tear gas and tear-gas guns and $289 for billies, baseball bats "and one sledge handle."

Torbic told sheepishly of his encounter with "Jack Smith," the undercover man, to whom he subsequently paid $1,000 for information on the doings of the C. I. O. in other cities.

After about three months, in the course of which he refused numerous tips from "Smith," most of them erroneous, he said Smith told him he owed him money.

"He said he was going to bring suit against me," Torbic said. "I'll be frank. I knew what your committee was doing. We didn't want anybody to know we had stool pigeons and I paid him $1,000 and told him to say nothing about it."

He said he had previously consulted James L. Williams, Republic's superintendent of company police, and that the latter told him "to pay the so-and-so $1,000 and get rid of him."

McDonald told in detail of being pursued and beaten by a crowd of men. A police car with officers in it stood nearby, he said, but they refused to help him. At one point, in fact, a policeman hit him across the nose with a blackjack, he testified. The mob forced him to the edge of town, he continued, and there some union men picked him up in an automobile and took him to a Toledo hospital, where he stayed "from Thursday to Tuesday night."

Three of the Treasury agents named in the indictment were suspended last fall, soon after their activities were disclosed in the preliminary investigation.

The policemen, it was learned, received information on deliveries of 5-gallon cans of alcohol from the three Polotnick brothers, Harry, Joseph and Jack, who appeared to enjoy the confidence of the distributors. While they raided suspected premises, one or more of the Polotnick brothers would appear, talk things over confidentially with the worried proprietor, and arrange a "fix" for amounts ranging from $50 to several thousand dollars.

In the activities of the Treasury agents, investigators revealed, it was one Max Wittenberg, alias Harry Goldberg, alias "Harry the Agent" who served as contact man, dribbling information on illegal alcohol deliveries and appearing on the scene to adjust matters when the raiding agents followed up his tips. Wittenberg and the Polotnick brothers all are named as co-conspirators in the indictment.

The policemen indicted were Sergt. Irving Bloom, Frederick V. Bradley, John P. Feltman, William C. Jones, alias Buckley, and William C. McEnery, all patrolmen. The Treasury agents were Edward P. Flynn, Charles M. Forbes and Thomas J. McGivney, suspended today, and Joseph M. Frucht, William L. Oettinger and Francis V. Thornton, all of New York.

Earle Jury Inquiry Given Right of Way legislation passed without sufficient notice.

"I, personally, subject of course to further consideration, believe the Legislature is without power to compel a disclosure of testimony now in possession of the district attorney to be laid before a grand jury," Judge Schaeffer said.

He also declared "there is no means by which an indictment can be presented or obeyed without a grand jury."

Many Democrats and Republicans expected another long court fight over the case.

Gov. Earle fought to the Supreme Court to halt the grand jury inquiry before he summoned the Legislature to act a week ago.

Smathers Urges 3d Term For President Roosevelt

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 1 (AP).—Senator William H. Smathers (Democrat), New Jersey, said tonight he had only one political ambition left—"To help elect President Roosevelt for a third term."

After that, Smathers said he will remain in the Senate until his term expires four years hence and then "retire to private life." He wants President Roosevelt to run for a third term because "there is no one big enough or strong enough to carry on for him."

YOU SAY HE HOPPED UP FROM THE TABLE AND DISAPPEARED?
YES AND, OH DEAR, IT WAS MY FIRST DINNER.
I GET IT! THIS MUST BE A SWEET TYPE BEER!
B-B-BUT BEER'S JUST BEER, ISN'T IT?
NOT AT ALL, MY LITTLE INNOCENT. IF YOUR HUSBAND'S LIKE MINE, HE DRINKS A DRY BEER, NOT THE SWEET TYPE.
THAT IS LOGICAL. FRANK LIKES DRY WINE ... OF COURSE HE'D WANT A DRY BEER!

WE'RE GOING TO START THINGS RIGHT! HERE'S SOME GOOD OLD DRY, BEER-Y GUNTHER'S!
DARLING, I KNOW NOW. SWEETS TO THE SWEET DOESN'T APPLY TO BEER.
I THINK THIS IS MY CUE TO LEAVE! HAPPY BEER DRINKING!

"HURRAY FOR THE DIFFERENCE!" SAY FOLKS WHO DRINK GUNTHER'S
There's a difference in beers, you bet!
And it's that difference which makes Gunther's Beer the outstanding favorite, the biggest seller in this part of the country.
Much of Gunther's difference is due to the use of an unusually high percentage of choice Bohemian hops which give a beer-y flavor that can not be duplicated with domestic hops alone. It takes a lot of knowing how, skillful brewing, thorough aging and carefully selected choice ingredients to make a dry, beer-y beer. And not even the expensive Pilsen (or Bohemian) beers are drier than Gunther's.
Gunther's is definitely not a sweet type beer, because we believe (and so do most people) that a beer should be zestful, that it should go well with food, that it should really do things to a thirst. Neither do we think a good beer should be made heavy bodied by adding solids; because a good beer shouldn't quickly give you a stuffed, "filled up" feeling.
It is a tribute to the good taste of American beer drinkers that throughout the country, wherever good beers are made, the big swing is to the dry kind of beer. Around Baltimore and Washington the swing is to Gunther's, the dry, beer-y beer, the only "Special Dry Lager" made in this section.
Next time you have a real thirst, try a tall, cool glass of Gunther's. Notice how its dryness chases away that hot, parched feeling. Notice how that beeriness really satisfies and hits a new flavor high. Then you too will say: "Hurray for the difference!"

Crump Judge Bars Troops From Memphis

Olson

line with more than a 100,000 majority. And I'm saying they're not going to steal this election from me down here." "You'll have to send the troops," chorused a sector of the crowd.)

"I want the voters to vote as they want to. I want the votes to be counted as they were voted and turned in as counted."

The Governor listed his State crime commission, the Federal investigators of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, and the State Democratic executive committee as his allies in obtaining "an honest election."

The latter committee is the key to this election. Four members are chosen in each of the nine Congressional districts, and the 36 men may throw out ballot returns from any county if they so choose. If Browning's electors dominate the commission, Shelby returns may be voided. Therefore, all factions look with varying degrees of pleasure toward a long, continued court battle, no matter what the results are. They confidently expect incumbent Senator George L. Berry to contest his almost certain defeat.

Has National Aspect.

This fight between a Federally organized WPA political machine (Crump through McKellar) and a strongly centralized State machine, assumes national proportions only through the heat of the battle and through its bearing on the 1940 senatorial race, in which Browning is expected to battle for the seat now held by the Senate's patronage master, Kenneth D. McKellar.

Not a single arrest was made at the fair grounds tonight, where Browning's address was delivered in a strong odor of coal smoke from nearby railroad yards, and punctuated with the oddly ethereal sound of the whizzing cars on a carnival giant racer, swooping about the deep-dipping curves in a flutter of lights.

Crowd Is Orderly.

Thus any hopes Browning may have held for disorders sufficient to justify calling out the guard to maintain peace at the polls were dispelled.

The tobacco-chewing Judge Martin used lusty language in side remarks accompanying his injunction.

He ordered Charles Miles, marshal, to assemble a force of deputy marshals, assistants and citizens, "to repel the invasion of Shelby County."

The struggle for control of this feuding State's politics passed into a new phase as Judge Martin peremptorily halted City Attorney Will Gerber and County Attorney Charles M. Bryan, ardent Crump supporters, as they began arguing for issuance of the restraining order. The judge, a picturesque, rugged Tennessean, who wears his belt slung under a comfortable stomach, and who will stand for no cigarette smoking in his court, shouted:

"Federal rulings very clearly and unhesitatingly give the United States court the authority to restrain an unlawful, unconstitutional and tyrannical action of the Governor in sending troops unlawfully and unconstitutionally into a county.

Police Get Pep Talk.

Citizens for miles around thronged to the city's fair grounds for the big show, while Public Safety Commissioner Cliff Davis harangued 175 uniformed officers and 75 plainclothes men in a 15'-minute pep talk on the need for preserving absolute order.

Davis, clean-cut young police chief who has won Memphis repeated national awards for traffic safety and fire prevention, told the husky officers as they idly twirled their new clubs:

"A man who threatens to blacken the name of this State by sending troops in here despite the fact he is Governor, is going to speak here tonight. I want all hecklers thrown out instantly. We will tolerate no disorder, no matter what the source.

"Reports have come to us that some of the Governor's friends may try to incite a riot or violence by throwing rotten tomatoes or eggs at him. You know what will follow that. So it's up to you men now."

The Governor's $3,000 chromium-trimmed leather-upholstered trailer was outside the house of Joe Hanover, his appointee as attorney general for this district, this afternoon. Hanover's appointment was one of the major embarrassments suffered by the Crump machine, which is endeavoring to elect Prentice Cooper, young Tennessee aristocrat, over Browning; Tom Stewart, one-time Scopes "monkey trial" prosecutor in Dayton, Tenn., as Senator over incumbent Senator Goerge L. Berry, and a utilities commissioner over a Browning man.

Cameron Carters Leave for a Third Journey to China

After two years at Takoma Park, Md., Prof. and Mrs. Cameron Carter left yesterday for their third long stay in China. They are missionaries for the Seventh-Day Adventists and first went to the Orient 15 years ago.

Their first return to the United States, after five years of teaching, was the result of war in China. After a year's furlough they went back to their field, then came home again on furlough, but war blocked their return. During the past year Prof. Carter taught at Washington Missionary College in Takoma Park.

They will sail from Vancouver, B. C., Saturday, accompanied by their daughter, for Hong Kong, where the church has its China division headquarters. There also is the denomination's provisional academy, its institution at Chiao Tou Tseng, in Kiangsu province, having been destroyed in recent fighting.

Prof. Carter will be principal of the normal department of the academy.

Fingerprint, Hair Clews in Michigan Artist's Murder

Algonac, Mich., Aug. 1 (AP).—A fingerprint found on a blood-stained club and a few wisps of hair clutched in the victim's right hand were clews today to the slayer of Augustus W. Roil, 45-year-old bachelor-farmer and dilettante artist who was found beaten to death yesterday at his home near here.

State police took to Port Huron, the county seat, late today for additional questioning Deputy Sheriff Frank Sharrow, Parley Gouelette and Linus Case, the three men whose visit to the Roil farm yesterday resulted in the discovery of the body in a chicken house, and Mrs. Case, wife of Lanlus Case.

A theory Roil was killed by a robber was discounted when $515 was found in the house, which had not been ransacked. Sheriff William L. Van Antwerp said Roil had corresponded with several women in California through a matrimonial agency, and his letter files were being scanned for possible clews.

Presidential Trip Assailed as Delay In Aiding Hungry

Winterhaven, Fla., Aug 1 (AP).—City Commissioner Sherman Taylor said today he had telegraphed Harry Hopkins, works progress administrator, asking why "taking care of hungry kids seems to come after a South Seas fishing trip."

He explained the telegram requested Hopkins to take immediate action toward obtaining President Roosevelt's signature on a WPA project which would put unemployed men in this area to work on a new $40,000 armory.

Jury Is Selected In Maine Murder

South Paris, Me., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—A jury of farmers, laborers, tradesmen and professional men was completed today to try former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll, 43, for the murder of Dr. James G. Widow Kills Young Innkeeper And Self With Gun in Trailer

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 1.—The bodies of Mrs. Ann Bowman, attractive young widow, and Henry Murray, 28, a tavern keeper, were found today in the woman's trailer parked near the Allegheny County airport here.

Coroner P. J. Henney reported the woman "probably" fired two bullets into the breast of Murray, her sweetheart, and then killed herself. A revolver, three shells fired, lay between the bodies. Both Murray and Mrs. Bowman lived in Homestead.

A note "to whom it may concern," was on a dressing table. It said: "I did it. It's between us two only. I borrowed the gun without consent, if you know what I mean." It was signed "Ann Bowman."

The bodies were discovered by fellow campers who peeped through a ventilator in the trailer after no activity had been seen around it for a day.

Mrs. Bowman was crumpled half across a screen door, wearing a slip and bedroom slippers. Murray, fully clothed, lay face down on the bed.

Loose Language.

Calm thinking and temperate expression are prerequisites to the solution of any problem involving inter-racial relationships. Without these fundamentals, issues which are difficult at best are likely to become more so.

This truism, unfortunately, seems to have been ignored or forgotten at the mass meeting on Sunday night where protest was made against the alleged brutalities of local policemen toward colored men and women. With very inadequate justification the conduct of the police was characterized as "urban lynching." One clergyman went so far as to declare that if John Warde had been a colored man "he would have been shot down in half an hour."

That kind of speech, if repeated often enough, is capable of causing infinite trouble. Warde, of course, was the young man who last week jumped 17 stories to his death from the window ledge of a New York hotel, after police had spent all day in coaxing him to reconsider his plan. The allusion, apparently, was to the local killing of Leroy Keys, the demented colored war veteran. But the cases are far from being identical. Warde had endangered nobody's life but his own. Keys, armed with a butcher knife, had barricaded himself in his room and had set fire to its furniture.

The necessity of shooting in the Keys case was by no means fully demonstrated. And the more recent and more flagrant shooting of a colored man for which a probationary policeman is now under indictment has gone further in making for inter-racial misunderstanding. But reckless language will not improve the situation. The local crime record shows what the local police are up against. And to suggest that they are acting with any animus in combating it is a matter in which the collection of convincing evidence should take precedence over the making of inflammatory charges.

Mr. Hull Slaps An Editor.

Secretary Hull was amply justified in taking a hearty crack at the Idaho Farmer, which recently asserted editorially that the American farmer is being "sold down the river" by the trade agreements program. And, in addition to being justified by the facts, the Secretary of State was shrewd in the timing of his rejoinder to a loose charge which is frequently voiced in anti-Administration circles. He waited for publication of the foreign trade figures for the first six months of 1938.

These completely knock the bottom out of the argument that the reciprocal trade agreements are resulting in a flood of agricultural imports. The case of wheat imported for consumption in the United States is a representative example. In the first six months of this year just 5,000 bushels of such wheat were imported, this being less than half the imports in this classification during the first six months of 1929, a good Republican year.

A similar story is told by the statistics on imports of meat products, another item where criticism of the trade agreements program has been sharp. Expressed in terms of value, imports under this heading totaled $15,500,000 in the first six months of 1938 as against $22,000,000 for the same period in 1929.

The Secretary of State, however, does not rest his case on the fact that current imports of agricultural products raised in this country are negligible. He knows, and says, that a falling off in the volume of international trade is no boon to anybody. So after correcting some very "distorted" figures used by the Idaho editor, he challenges the basic assumption that there was anything essentially injurious to the American farmer in the larger imports of agricultural products piled up in 1937, in part because of drought conditions in the previous year.

Nearly half of these imports in terms of value, the Secretary shows, consisted in 1937 of products such as rubber, coffee, tea, cocoa and silk, which are not raised in the United States. Normally the proportion of these non-competitive imports is much higher. Mr. Hull seldom indulges in satire. But he approaches it in this instance by hinting that the "Idaho Farmer" seems to think that if Americans ceased drinking coffee it would somehow improve the lot of domestic agriculture.

This blast from Secretary Hull is welcome. The simple fact that trade is trade—that if we want to sell cotton and tobacco abroad we do well to buy coffee and rubber from abroad—is very hard to get across with those who do not understand the system of production and exchange. The Idaho Farmer, at least, will probably henceforth be rather more careful with its use of trade statistics and the conclusions drawn therefrom.

It would be pleasant to believe that Mr. Hull could, by such thoughtful and factually fortified defense of his trade policies, eliminate all criticism of a purely captious or political nature. That is not likely to be the case. But convincing and temperate defense of an intelligent program does win support. As the surveys of the American Institute of Public Opinion indicate, the reciprocal trade agreements program, under the patient but resolute leadership of the Secretary of State, is steadily gaining in popular understanding and support.

A Very Broad Indictment.

In an unusual application of the Sherman act, the Department of Justice proposes to move against the District Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold is persuaded that both have acted in monopolistic fashion in opposing the Group Health Association formed here among Government employes.

Heretofore the function of the antitrust law has been to break up economic combinations acting in restraint of trade. In invoking it against a representative professional group many confusing considerations enter the picture.

The statement by the Department of Justice "interprets the law as prohibiting combinations which prevent others from competing for services as well as for goods." Under this broad interpretation it might be said that any move of organized medicine to debar quacks is potentially illegal. And it might further be suggested that the entire program of the National Labor Relations Board, founded on recognition of majority labor unions for collective bargaining, is perilously close to violating the Sherman act. An Administration, which lays great stress on the right of labor to organize, should be doubly careful in suggesting that similar action by professional men may be open to legal question.

Despite doubts as to the law in Mr. Arnold's proposal, there is no question of its broad social significance. It will serve to advertise and intensify an issue which concerns intimately every citizen of the land. Possibly it may serve to clarify the main aspects of this issue, though an increase in acrimony seems more likely. The role of the GHA in the case is largely incidental. It represents merely a convenient example of the attempt to improve the economics of health, a movement which organized medicine has thus far done more to oppose than to foster.

Indeed, it seems doubtful whether the GHA can profit in any direct way even if the projected grand jury investigation should sustain the Department of Justice. The local hospitals might be forced to open their doors to the GHA staff. But probably so much antagonism would be cultivated by the court fight that GHA members could have little confidence in using the institutions. It needs only a very casual acquaintance with the medical profession to realize that its leaders are not the type of men who can be coerced into acting against ideals for which many of them make continuous sacrifices. And the intention of the American Medical Association to fight the issue is already abundantly clear.

In view of this situation Mr. Arnold's statement must be regarded as unfortunate, in spite of an obvious effort to assuage the sting in the indictment. And regret at the widening of the breach is strengthened by the recent signs suggesting that organized medicine was on the point of modifying its opposition toward the group health movement. Locally, the GHA president last week made a very reasonable peace offer to the medical society and, unless reports are greatly mistaken, a disposition to bury the scalpel has been developing among the latter's general membership. On a country-wide scale, the discussions of the National Health Conference summoned here recently are believed to have impressed organized medicine with its obligation to cooperate with rather than to block well-meaning attempts to lower the cost of medical care.

Without the best medical leadership any efforts to reach the proper solution of the national health problem is doomed. It is to be hoped that no legal disputations will be allowed to obscure this cardinal fact.

Trotskyites And Matchsticks.

It may be, as a communique issued by the Japanese army claims, that a clash between Japanese and Russian troops on the Korean-Siberian frontier yesterday resulted in the repulse of the latter.

It may be, as is further asserted, that five Russian warplanes were shot down while attempting to damage the Japanese railway communications. In the absence of confirmatory data from impartial sources, and in the face of Moscow's denials of a Japanese victory in the uneasy angle where Korea, Manchuria and Siberia meet, it is difficult to know precisely what did happen.

One thing is clear, however: A Japanese military victory over Russian troops at this time, even if not followed up, would be very useful to the Japanese army. The war with China, which should according to the original calculations of the general staff have lasted only a few weeks, has actually dragged into a second year with the end still far from sight. And an attempt by Japanese troops in Manchuria to repeat the easy triumph scored over Russia on the Amur a year ago recently met with failure. The loss of face involved can only be undone by proving to the Japanese themselves, and to the world in general, that the Japanese army is still top-dog in the Far East.

However, it would seem most improbable that either Japan or Russia will risk a knock-down drag-out fight at this time. Japan's economic difficulties were made dramatically clear the other day when the order was issued that matchsticks produced in the island empire should be shortened a quarter of an inch in order to conserve resources. In Russia, on the other hand, Trotskyites are apparently still plotting against Stalin in every corner while Hitler is much closer round the corner than is prosperity.

The Soviet game in the Far East is clearly to avoid trouble and wait for Japan to exhaust herself. But in view of the very decided change in the balance of forces that has taken place in the Orient during the past 12 months, Russia is hardly likely to back down before any Japanese aggressions, even if these are primarily for face-saving purposes. The danger is not that either Tokyo or Moscow want serious hostilities, but that both may stumble into them.

Financing Old Age Benefits.

The methods employed in financing the old age insurance system have been subjected to a constant barrage of criticism from disinterested individuals who support the principles of social insurance as well as from those whose chief aim has been to make political capital out of their attacks.

The latest demand for modification of the present system comes from the American Bar Association's committee on labor, employment and social security. In a report submitted to the annual convention it is asserted that the most important respect in which the social security act should be amended is "by the elimination of the present so-called old age reserve account, the substitution of a pay-as-you-go policy, and the requirement that sums collected under the act be earmarked and set aside solely for the purpose of the act."

This demand is in accord with views expressed by Senator Vandenberg who, last spring, requested the Advisory Council on Social Security to consider the feasibility of reducing pay-roll taxes by abandoning the full reserve system. While not willing to advocate immediate action, the council was open-minded on the subject, conceding that there were other ways of financing old age insurance which, on further study, might prove to have advantages over the existing system.

When the social security act was passed it was generally understood to be an experimental kind of legislation that would in the course of time be subjected to overhauling. President Roosevelt has, in fact, made various recommendations for the extension and liberalization of the old age insurance provisions of the law, but none so far with regard to changes in financing methods.

There are, of course, certain ulterior advantages in retaining the present financing system from the Administration viewpoint, although it would be doing an injustice to the framers of the law to assume that they were influenced by such considerations. At the urging of the Secretary of the Treasury, Congress voted to make the pay-roll levies higher than originally intended in order to build up a reserve against future demands and presumably to enable the system to sustain itself without aid from the Treasury.

Critics have pointed out that this procedure is based upon a false analogy between the position of the Government and that of a private insurance company which builds up reserves to meet future demands. The Government, however, is not compelled to take such precautions since its power to tax enables it to make up deficiencies. Moreover, it can vary at will the scale of payments and make participation in the plan compulsory. Finally, and most important, a reserve invested in the Government's own interest-bearing securities would not lighten the burden resting on future generations of taxpayers because only through taxation could the interest on the obligations be paid. Consequently, setting a scale of pay-roll levies that for many years will greatly exceed benefit payments cannot be justified for the reasons stated.

It is frankly admitted by the Advisory Council, as well as by the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, that so long as the budget remains unbalanced the upbuilding of the old age reserve fund reduces the amount that has to be borrowed from banks, insurance companies and other private parties. Significantly the council adds that "the fulfillment of promises made to the wage-earner included in the old age insurance system depends upon, more than anything else, the financial integrity of the Government." It concludes that the present reserve system does not involve any misuse of funds nor does it endanger their safety. That is unquestionably true so long as there is no doubt about the financial stability of the Government.

It does not follow, however, that the present system is as good from the viewpoint of industry and the wage-earner as would be a more realistic pay-as-you-go policy with reduced demands made upon employers and employes and with Government contributions to supplement these taxes. The United States is said to be the only country to employ the full-reserve device. The fact that experience elsewhere has demonstrated the workability of the alternative method is another argument in favor of the changes recommended by members of the bar and a host of other competent critics.

English Debt Comparison.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The deftness with which Mr. Charles Michelson, New Deal publicity director, twists figures and deduces therefrom magic results is matched only by Mr. Roosevelt's carelessness with huge sums when some New Deal super-extravagance is to be passed off with infectious laughter.

The vastness of the English debt compared with the triviality of ours (but give the New Deal time!) was a topic of Mr. Michelson's Sunday sermon. By deriding our debt he would seem to be discrediting, almost charging with political hypocrisy, his chief, whose warnings about evils of debt—when run up by others—are of public record in numerous speeches.

The fact that exports have increased (thus in small measure mitigating our depression) while this country of great standards wallows in the slough of the Roosevelt depression, would seem to point further flaw to the publicity chief's reasoning.

Salient point is: While England's debt has kept steady, ours has leaped ahead unleashed, its chief visible results a vast gain in bureaucracy. Billions of English pounds went into development of colonial possessions (comparable to Mr. Roosevelt's alibi of State solvency at Federal expense, except that returns have and will continue to distinguish the English outlay).

It seems unfair for an administration devoted to lofty humanitarianism to allude to Hoover's failure to relieve distress, save homes, etc. Hoover (of whom no defense is attempted here) bucked a Congress, later to become the submissive rubber stamp, dedicated to the discrediting of any constructive suggestion from the White House in 1932.

But Mr. Roosevelt's court-packing attempt fizzled through opposition of his own followers, against whom vindictive purge threats are now in order. In this there's a distinction worth pondering by such of the 27,000,000 dupes as fell for Mr. Roosevelt's impossible promises and suave expositions of the vast gains made under his Administration. The vast gains in debt and unemployment being excluded, of course.

Nocturnal Noise Makers.

To the Editor of The Post.—Sir: Reference your item on "Hazen Strikes a Blow to Save Right to Sleep Late in A. M.," may I offer in all humility the following suggestions for the good of the cause:

The honorable Commissioner and his efficient agents referred to in this article might enforce the regulations already on the statute books with reference to the sleep-disturbers commonly know as taxis, private cars and other peace breakers.

The practice of taxi drivers who collect at the stands provided for them in front of hotels and apartment houses, holding their at-all-hour conventions and playing the radio at full blast, should be and could be stopped without additional regulations if the will to do was present in the administration now in office.

Many of those thus rendered unable to sleep must be up and at work early in order to earn money to help pay for the committee the Commissioner suggests.

The Bonding Racket.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Familiar with your well-known policy of decency and fair play and remembering that some years ago your paper fought to break up the bonding racket around the local courts, a racket that permits certain shyster lawyers and crooked bondsmen to victimize the poor unfortunates who become involved in the law, I am writing in the hope that you will strike now and bring to light and to an end this deplorable condition that is a challenge to the administration of criminal justice in the Nation's Capital.

I recently read that a Mr. Harlan Wood is heading a special committee of the District Bar Association to wipe out this evil. It is the hope of every decent-minded resident that Mr. Wood will have the courage and will be given the encouragement to carry on and rid the courts of these legal vultures.

"Good Neighbor."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Sky pilots tell us that the spirit back of an act is the measure of that act. A large tract of land across the Hudson from the Roosevelt estate has just been given to a Negro cult, thousands strong. And in this act, one Howland Spencer, the donor, has revealed his soul for all to see. His clothes no longer cover him. He is a "nudist" in the fullest sense of the word.

If that's how it is perhaps Mr. Roosevelt better stay right on at the White House. They seem to be burning his bridges back into private life. He has made us a "good neighbor" here in Washington and we like to think of him down here at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue.

"Dark And Bloody."

Theodore O'Hara gave to Kentucky the name that has clung to it. The stanza from his familiar "Bivouac of the Dead" is little quoted in itself, but the Kentucky feudist, mountain and political, has kept alive O'Hara's "Sons of the Dark and Bloody Ground." The assassination of William Goebel, claimant of the Governor's chair, in 1900, and the subsequent trial of the young Attorney General, Caleb Powers, charged with the murder, tore Kentucky apart politically for more than a decade. They were still trying the acquitted Powers on street corners and on the hustings when Bryan ran against William Howard Taft for President. Whether you believed him innocent or guilty made or broke you in many sections of that intense State.

Has Kentucky developed another Goebel case in the charge by Happy Chandler's personal physician that the Governor and two of his aides have been the victims of poisoning? Chandler is in the midst of the hottest political battle of his life. The young Governor has boldly challenged Alben Barkeley for the Democratic Senate nomination. (Barkley is the President's "My very old friend.") Chandler, one of the most colorful campaigners the Blue Grass State has ever known, became ill shortly after the Roosevelt visit, during which the President made a palpable effort to sell the State on the experience of the majority leader in the Senate. The Governor was gamely speaking Monday night from his sickbed, against, he said, doctor's order. The poisoning diagnosis, sworn to by his physician, came hard on the heels of that effort.

Under the circumstances, the physician's statement must be taken seriously elsewhere and will be taken seriously in Kentucky. It remains to be seen what part it may play in the oncoming primary. The fuse has been laid to that powder train at the timeliest moment for an election explosion.

Italy And "Racism."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Italian government has, at long last, fallen in line with Hitler's brand of antirace contamination.

Leaving Hitler and his pet proteges out of the picture, let us take an historian's glimpse into the racial stock that Benito Mussolini is so anxious to safeguard against possible defilement from Jewish quarters.

What did the great German encyclopedist of an earlier century, Friedrich Arnold Brockhaus, write of the Italians? "They are a typical mixed people come into existence through the taking in of numberless slaves in the Roman Empire and through the immigration of the Germans in the north and the Arabs of the south."

So much for Mussolini's Aryan supremacy. It would seem that the Italian dictator is determined to take literally the scriptural dictum that "the last shall be first;" but the Scriptures also say, and that on the same authority of Jesus himself, that "Salvation is through the Jew."

The Jewish race needs no apologist. The achievements of its children are written on the sands of time for them who run to read. The Jewish people have for thousands of years lived among divers peoples, and in divers lands, in conformity with a self-imposed moral and ethical code more stringently disciplinary than anything this side of the cloister. It was out of this pious and saintly race of men that God chose "His only begotten Son," when Aryans and Romans were available in droves.

Does Mussolini dare challenge God's judgment?

Before the Jews gave Christ to the world they formulated and presented to the world an eternal code of morals and a saintly code of ethics. Every word of the Bible from Genesis to Revelation was conceived by the mind of a Jew. Every vision and inspiration of the Old and New Testaments is the fruit of the Jewish spirit. Every prophet and psalmist, every apostle of Jesus was a member of the hated Jewish race.

Now the Italian government decrees that books written by Jews may not be translated into Italian. Will the Italian government dare to suppress the New Testament? A book authored by Jews, whose teachings were first promulgated by Jews and for Jews exclusively.

What other contributions the Jews have made in the civilizing fields of creative endeavor the whole educated world knows. That Mussolini and his ten professorial Charley McCarthys should fear race contamination from Jewish sources can only be explained on the theory that them who the gods would destroy they first make mad.

Surely Mussolini is not completely mad. Fascist governments need money, and racial purity is but a clumsy excuse for confiscating the hard-earned belongings and savings of the Jewish people.

Whatever the reason, Christian humanity should not permit this infamous persecution of a race out of which its God emerged to save the world from just such barbarities. Man's persistent inhumanity to the Jew has left an indelible blemish on the soul of mankind. Will the conscience of Christian humanity permit now this new atrocious offense against its own spiritual integrity?

Louisa.

IF I should go home tomorrow, and a small black wraith should whirl toward me, like the shadow of a dancing dervish, I would hold out my hands and say, "Why, Louisa, you haven't changed at all."

For Death could never dissolve so spritely a soul as Louisa's. Furthermore, throughout her long life (no one knows just how long it actually was) she was familiar with his dark face, for there was something macabre about her queerness. She lived in a world of "hants" and conjure, and death, to her was a personal entity, a Philip Merrivale conception, all-powerful and terrible and sometimes kind.

Had she been born a red Indian, she would have been treated tenderly, as befitting one who had been touched by the Great Spirit; as it was, the townsfolk looked upon her tolerantly and affectionately, with the almost paternal regard that Southerners have for the old-time Negro. She had been a slave, and long before my day had been considered too old (and too pixilated) for regular employment. But she was as much a part of the atmosphere and background of the little town as the Confederate Monument or the Orphanage bull. Someone had left her a cabin, and her wants were few. She scuttled about, tattered and barefooted, perhaps crowned with an enormous plumed hat she had wheedled from someone cleaning an attic, or perhaps bearing leftover biscuits and greens from a kitchen where she had done an ineffectual bit of work. She never seemed to be in need, and concern for the future bothered her not at all.

Louisa's cabin was a repository for everything under the sun, for she was always on hand at movings and seasonal house cleanings. When the Golden Oak era arrived, she bore off more than one simple and beautiful piece that had given place to the new craze.

One summer evening after supper Aunt Nan and my mother walked down to her cabin, with me darting ahead of them trying to catch an early lightning bug. The little shanty was hidden in a tangle of vines and flowers, for Louisa was the unofficial florist of the town, and could make a floorboard sprout if she tended it. The sun was setting as we walked in the door, and it cast a coppery light on the little old woman, scampering ahead to lead the way for her callers. The room was a bewildering jumble of junk and fine pieces. Rickety chairs with their seats missing were pulled up to a battered Sheraton table, shining with the dull gleam of old mahogany. Aunt Nan, who loved good antiques with passion and zeal, had often tried to buy it, but "ole Miz So-and-So" had given that table to Louisa, and no money could pay for it.

A careening whatnot shelf held Cracker Jack favors and broken Christmas tree balls and lovely old luster pitchers. On the washstand stood a real Bohemian glass decanter, blood red in the sunset, with deer giving perpetual chase, Keats fashion, about the base. I remember touching, with an envious thrill, a basket of blown-out Easter eggs and a string of gold glass beads. The scent of cape jessamine and magnolias drifted in through the open door, making the air in the cabin insuferably sweet and heavy.

The yard was as much of a hodgepodge as the cabin. Rare plants grew in tubs, with ivory honeysuckle and deep purple passion flowers (we children called them Maypops) creeping with optimistic determination over the hard clay dust. Her white friends were always bringing Louisa cuttings from their trips, and she had azaleas and oleanders and great pink camellias, whose parent bushes bloomed in lush profusion down in Charleston. She had "Northern" roses, sent her from Virginia and Tennessee, and masses of home roses—the fragrant white Memorial Rose, the Seven Sisters, Harrison's Yellow and the flamboyant Cherokee, and the well was covered with a golden tumbling mass of Lady Banksias. She had an orange tree growing in a tub, and the waxen white blossoms seemed far sweeter than the perfume of an Indian River grove.

Louisa favored white flowers, as she considered them most fitting for weddings and funerals. After a death she often arrived before the undertaker to place her sheath of August lilies or pale white violets, according to the season, beside the dead.

If she loved funerals, she delighted almost as much in weddings. Her palms and rubber plants were always borrowed to decorate the church, and many was the bride, in the old days, who carried a bouquet of Louisa's growing.

And now Louisa is dead. May the angels be kind to her and give her their wornout harps and last season haloes to deck her tiny Mansion; may celestial housewives be tolerant if occasionally she makes away with a pan of hot biscuits. For the Green Pastures will be greener for her coming, and if there are any bare spots, she will make them blossom like the rose.

HAZEL SCAIFE DETWILER.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

WPA St. Francis.

ANYONE at all familiar with the beauty of the hills of San Francisco will blanch with horror at the drawings of the monster—and monstrous—statue of St. Francis of Assisi with which Christmas Tree Point is threatened in the name of art by the Works Progress Administration. This tombstone cutter's nightmare will rise 156 feet above a 35-foot base and, although it may one day frighten off a Japanese armada, civilization were better served should some dear foe sail close enough one day to blow it down.

The subject of God-awful statuary in public places is to the fore in New York just now, thanks to the rather reckless observation of Robert Moses, the park commissioner, that the city has some of the worst in the world. Mr. Moses has some interesting entries for a competition of this kind, to be sure, but when he challenges the world he takes in too much territory.

London has statues in a hundred unexpected little public squares, erected in honor of departed aldermen, lawyers and shipowners, that make even our figure at Balto, the Eskimo dog, look as if the Venus de Milo should have him on a leash, but Mr. Moses need not cross salt water to find worse than his worst. The Masonic Memorial, that dreadful heap of children's spelling blocks outside Washington, will out-awful the most appalling hunk of iron-mongery in all New York, including the outlying metropolitan district, and the figure symbolizing the art of the moving pictures, with which it is customary to honor genius in Hollywood once a year, will stand him off, at least.

BUT IF this statue of St. Francis of Assisi is carried through to completion (an old newspaper phrase which I could not defend to save my life) the championship of the world will belong to San Francisco beyond challenge by the Totem Poles of Alaska or even the anthracite and laundry soap carvings that used to find serio-comic sponsorship in Frank Crowninshield's Vanity Fair.

It is a figure with the conventionalized head of the 1910 model of family doctor, with a pointed beard, inclosed in an aviator's helmet, and having, beneath the chin, a sort of bib or drool cloth. The hands are upraised in the standard posture of the guest of honor at a stickup, and the figure then declines, round, rigid as a concrete pipe and innocent of fold or human line, to the waist, where it disappears into a barrel extending to the base.

The New York Times reports, on the authority of Archbishop John J. Mitty, of San Francisco, that the design is the result of deep study of the life of St. Francis by Benjamino Bufano. The artist may be serious, although they are great wags, these artists, and they sometimes palm off roguishness on laymen in the guise of solemn effort. If Mr. Bufano was kidding and this design was intended to depict the taxpayer who will have to dig up $50,000 of WPA money to pay for his joke, then I think I see the symbolism. The taxpayer is standing in his barrel, having already lost his pants to Henry Morgenthau's implacables, and holds his hands uplifted from force of habit, as of the days when he did have pants and the Internal Revenue thought him worth a frisk.

IF MR. BUFANO is serious about this, however, then the matter is indeed grim, for I, personally, will undertake to set to work with an ordinary beer mallet and an ordinary carpenter's chisel, on an ordinary rock, and make a better statue of St. Francis, without even a picture to guide me, much less deep study in Assisi, failing which I will contribute $100, not toward the erection of Mr. Bufano's St. Francis, however, but toward a public subscription to prevent the perpetration of this permanent pollution of a magnificent American site.

The San Francisco Citizens Committee which is promoting this outrage holds that the statue will publicize San Francisco, and so, indeed, it will, in the sense that the horrors of Madame Tussaud's publicize London. But Madame Tussaud's operates behind closed doors, and those who go to see the dreadful scenes in the shadowy crypts do so by choice. They are not compelled to look, whereas this stupendous heap will affright a whole populace save only in kindly night or God-sent fog.

San Francisco is politically obdurate and may deserve ill of the WPA, but what has Harry Hopkins got against St. Francis of Assisi?

By Eugene Pharo.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Philadelphia.

WHILE BRAVE WORDS about fundamental principles of government are being emitted from time to time in Pennsylvania, the ordinary voter, unless he is possessed of the profoundest and most naive faith, can manage to see in the present legislative imbroglio only a contest between political factions that will stop at nothing. He may be wrong, but there is no ready means to convince him of it. The available evidence reads all the other way. The result, among average persons, is a discouraged skepticism even about those leaders who they were convinced had genuinely democratic ends in view.

Gov. Earle's reputation for the past four years has been the most obvious emblem of his party's aims. Until recently it was assumed that at least personally and on the point of individual honor, there could be no questioning his integrity. Now, regardless of the outcome of present legislative and court battles, no one is very certain.

The final doubts have been precipitated not so much by charges brought against Earle and his associates in the administration, although a State Supreme Court justice ruled that there was enough evidence of wrong-doing to justify an investigation of fact by a grand jury situated in the same county with the State government. The Governor was generally assumed to be so rich in his own right as to be beyond the reach of the pettier sorts of temptation. Such concessions to political necessity as he was known to have made were regarded as inescapable features of the political system. They were generally overlooked in token of the full-blooded way in which he continued to sum up the social resentments of the "have-nots" against the "haves."

No Integrity Spared In Torrent Of Congress.

THE DECISION of Earle and his advisers to summon the Legislature in the special session that began July 25, and obviously for the purpose of preventing the grand jury investigation of charges against him that was set to begin August 8, was another matter. In the first place it was accompanied by such a flood of political, legislative and journalistic Billingsgate that it left no ideal of governmental and personal integrity untouched. In the charges Earle made against his opponents there appeared so full a measure of cynicism about the motives of others that it was too much to expect that some of it would fail to strike back and cover his own actions. Besides which, the call for the session looked too much like a frenzied effort on Earle's part to protect himself from exposure by enlisting the aid of those in the Legislature whose political fortunes are largely identified with his own.

The upshot was that the whole machinery of State government, and the fundamental law that upholds it, together with every agency of that government—including the courts, the law officers, the executive, and the Legislature—were impugned recklessly on the first pages of every morning's papers. And the papers themselves were dragged in as well, with the familiar New Deal recriminations about a "kept press."

It began to dawn on even the most ignorant—perhaps, indeed, especially on the most ignorant—that the whole disgraceful situation is merely part of a ruthless contest over a State election. Fundamental matters of principle and statecraft as a result received little attention.

That there are basic principles involved is apparent to anyone even partially "learned in the law." They are obvious to editorial writers and commentators. But few are saying anything about them. For one thing it seems incredible that they are having anything to do with the decisions being reached at Harrisburg. Instead, events are generally recognized as turning upon divisions between partisan political adherents. And in the midst of that situation the New Dealers, for all their pretentions of special civic virtue, are proving no more loathe than they accuse old line Republicans of being, to confuse the public interest with their own ambition—the ambition, namely, to stay in power in the State, and to be able to do their share toward keeping their party in power in the Nation.

Utopian Background Makes Sharp Silhouette.

NEVER BEFORE have the bare bones of political controversy and machine self-restraint been so apparent to the man in the street. And never before have they been outlined so starkly against a background of Utopian pretensions, and claims to social service. If it were not that the public mind has become accustomed to recognizing the unscrupulous urge for dominance on the part of its "servants," such as has been demonstrated by Adolf Hitler, Mayor Frank Hague, Gov. Huey Long, Benito Mussolini and Comrade Stalin, not to make the list longer, the shock of current events in Pennsylvania would be more severe on the mass of the electorate than it is. As it is, some of those with whom the situation has been discussed have displayed a hang-dog sort of air, instead of the pleased confidence in the good intentions of the Administration that the same individuals had evinced earlier. So that if—as the Democrats claim so feverishly—everything that has happened has been the result of dire Republican plotting, that plotting is having a tremendously fruitful result.

The point has been reached where the special House of Assembly committee which the Legislature was called together to appoint, in order to hear and decide about charges against Earle and 13 associates, will have to do a particularly ingenious and convincing job to affect the attitude of the electorate. For their conclusions will be even more suspect than the conclusions of the grand jury, composed of Democrats and Republicans.

Political Dominance Assailed By Governor.

THE GOVERNOR and his advisers have turned loose all the immense power at their command to convince the people that no conclusions of their ordinary tribunals of justice can be relied upon except in a political sense. Bare facts, as brought out by reputedly impartial and disinterested bodies, are beyond discovery if the charges of the Governor and his opponents are true. For their contention has been that only partisan political findings can be expected from even the most dignified and highly placed authorities in the State, including the Supreme Court and those called to serve on grand juries. All points of view are based exclusively, they insist, upon the desires of the parties to which judges and jurymen, as well as prosecuting officers, owe special and slavish obedience.

The only exception to this, the Earle administration is bold enough to assert, is from elected legislators of the Democratic Party. These will investigate and decide in the people's interest, even if they have to cut off their own heads as a consequence.

To the ordinary man it's all just a little too thick to believe. And to the studious, the assumption that legislation to define the limits of the powers of grand juries and legislatures would have been presented in such a crisis and steam-rollered through by party whips, if the main idea was to clarify constitutional principles, doesn't quite hang together either. It appears to be instead a deliberate effort to remove a judicial check on the executive, and to replace it with a legislative "check," simply because the present Legislature is amenable to Democratic Party control, whereas the courts, as yet, are not. Where this leaves the interests of the common people, to whose welfare the New Dealers have pledged themselves, is a question that seems to have been laid absent-mindedly upon the table.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Nemesis Of Tyranny.

Paris, Aug. 1.

IN THE preparation for war and in the conduct of what we may call pre-war diplomacy free nations are under many obvious disadvantages as compared with totalitarian states. They do not have complete control of the lives, the labor, the property, and the opinions of their people. They are dealing with citizens and voters. So they have to persuade their people to make the sacrifices which modern armaments demand. They have to induce them to work. They have to persuade them to follow their leaders. They have to convince them that their policies and their measures are right. All this causes delay, hesitation, half-measures, and in the realm of diplomacy it makes for vacillation. Decisive action is difficult when opinions are divided, and ruthless action has to be avoided because opinions are sensitive.

That is why the potentially stronger free nations have not succeeded in mobilizing anything like their full military power. That is why the dictators are in proportion to their resources so very much more ready for the first phases of a war. The free states cannot mobilize their full strength until they too are dictatorships, and they would not be dictatorships until after a war had begun. That too is why they are outmaneuvered again and again in the field of diplomacy. They cannot act decisively and swiftly and ruthlessly because they have to take into account all sorts of things, such as treaties, laws, the rights of their parliaments, the position of political parties, and the moral conscience of their people and of other peoples.

BUT THESE patent weaknesses of which everyone is aware, and on which the dictatorships count so heavily, are not without their compensation. For while the free nations are less efficient in preparing for war and in the first phases of a war, they alone can hope to endure a long war and to emerge from it without a catastrophe.

The reason the free nations can endure a long war is not merely that they have much greater natural resources. Russia has very great natural resources, but Russia is surely in no condition to endure a long war. For a modern war means that the peasants and a large part of the working class, all of it not employed in making munitions, have to be supplied with arms. And that is why a totalitarian state which goes to war must win quickly or the regime is lost. For who will disarm the army when the war is over?

THESE MODERN despotisms are possible in the last analysis only because the masses of the people are deprived not only of their civil rights, but of all means of resistance. The people are an unarmed and divided crowd faced with a small, carefully selected compact corps which has all the machine guns, all the tanks and all the gas bombs. This is the reason why it is altogther improbable that any one of the three great dictatorships will be overthrown by a spontaneous uprising from within. No Paul Revere can ride through the countryside and call upon the farmers to take down their muskets from the mantelpiece and go to war. The farmers have no muskets. Modern weapons are a government monopoly jealously guarded by the modern despot, and there is no kind of personal heroism which can make any impression upon the machine gun and the tank operated by a specially trained Pretorian Guard.

This is the only possible explanation of the fact that millions and millions of men today are enduring oppression more savage than anything that has been known in the civilized world for centuries. The thing is endured not because the people like it and approve it. For there are millions upon millions in the region between the Rhine and the Pacific Ocean who cannot possibly like these iron despotisms since they are the victims. They endure them because they are unarmed and all resistance is hopeless. If they protest, they are reported. If they strike, they are shot. If they fail to approve, they are condemned to starve.

BUT WHAT would be the position in these countries if war broke out and masses of the people had to be equipped with arms? How can a despot arm the masses whom he has oppressed without the certainty that they will not easily surrender their arms? Once there is a general mobilization the rulers of the state no longer have a monopoly of the weapons. Then the masses, though they have no civil rights, have the guns in their possession and the military power of the state has in effect been popularized.

Is it a coincidence that all the autocratic states which fought in the World War were overthrown either by the returning soldiers or by revolutionists that the returning soldiers were unwilling to shoot down? It is no coincidence. You can oppress a disarmed people. But once you rearm that people, you must not expect the oppressed to give up their arms again until they have tried to redress their grievances and to take their revenge.

• • • •

THIS IS the cancer of tyranny in the modern world, that it is driven by its very nature toward war, but that once tyranny goes to war, it has provided the masses with the weapons by which the tyranny must be destroyed. That is why the dictators, as long as they are able to keep their perspective and to control their wilder supporters, must play with fire, but must seek by every means to avoid the explosion. They cannot make peace because they are tyrants, and they dare not make war because they dare not arm their victims.

So they must move as long as they can in a twilight zone between war and peace, like that which we are now in, using all the measures of war short of war itself.

The Balkans

The Balkans, once the cockpit of Europe, is now one of the most peaceful areas on the continent. At Salonika, a pact was signed on Sunday between the Balkan Entente and Bulgaria agreeing to cancellation of the limitations which the post-war Treaty of Neuilly placed on Bulgaria's army. The significance of this development is discussed by Barnet Nover in adjoining columns.

The Kentucky Primary

By Mark Sullivan

Prestige At Stake.

IN THE effort of President Roosevelt and the coterie of intimate New Dealers around him to keep control of the Democratic party, the most conspicuous test is the primary which takes place in Kentucky next Saturday. The Kentucky primary is the most conspicuous because Senator Alben W. Barkley, whose renomination is at stake, has been especially willing to follow the President's leadership. As leader of the Democratic majority in the Senate, it is a question whether he has been as much a leader of that body, as representative of the President in the body. His elevation to the leadership, following the death of the late Senator Robinson of Arkansas, was due in part to President Roosevelt's help. In the Democratic caucus, Mr. Barkley won the leadership, against Senator Harrison of Mississippi, by one vote—and everybody felt that more than one of the votes Mr. Barkley received came to him through influence emanating from the White House.

Senator Barkley's struggle for renomination in Kentucky makes that the most conspicuous of the primaries. It is not the most typical. And it is not decisive at all. Victory for Senator Barkley, and incidentally for President Roosevelt, in Kentucky, would not by any means mean victory in the broad struggle of Mr. Roosevelt and those close to him to keep control of the party. Mr. Roosevelt could win the Kentucky battle yet not win the war. On the other hand, if Mr. Barkley and Mr. Roosevelt should lose in Kentucky, it would be a serious blow to the President's prestige.

• • • •

THIS WHOLE struggle for control of the party can be more clearly understood by looking upon it from another approach.

In the cleavage that arose in the Democratic majority in the Senate, between those who were for the President's program and those who were opposed to some details of it, the commonly accepted test was Mr. Roosevelt's court proposal.

On the 33 Democratic Senators who opposed the court proposal, nine had to come up for renomination in Democratic primaries or conventions in their respective States during the recent summer. First of the nine to face the test was Senator Gillette of Iowa. Mr. Gillette was renominated in spite of efforts to defeat him by persons so close to Mr. Roosevelt that their attempt to defeat Mr. Gillette could hardly have been made without the President's approval.

Second to face the test was Senator Van Nuys of Indiana. In that State, candidates for the Senate are chosen not in primaries but by State conventions, in which party leaders have much power to influence or dictate action. The New Deal Governor of Indiana and other party leaders marked Senator Van Nuys for destruction. He announced that if denied renomination he would run as an independent Democrat. As the time for the convention approached, the New Deal Democratic leaders in the State withdrew their opposition and renominated Senator Van Nuys.

Third to come up was Senator Adams, of Colorado. Mr. Adams was opposed by a candidate who was commended as 100 per cent for Mr. Roosevelt. The Democratic State assembly indorsed Senator Adams by a vote of 1,286 to 218.

So the three Democratic Senators who voted against the court proposal, and who so far have come up for renomination, have been successful. It is anticipated that a fourth, Senator Bennett Champ Clark, of Missouri, will be renominated in the primary of that State this week. It likewise is commonly anticipated that Senator McCarran will be renominated in Nevada and Senator Lonergan in Connecticut.

• • • •

THERE REMAIN but three of the nine whose fate is in any real question. They are Senators Smith, of South Carolina; George, of Georgia; Tydings, of Maryland. These three are the only ones of the nine who, in the common judgment, might be subjected to purge. Indeed, the persons close to Mr. Roosevelt who are most eager in the matter of defeating Senators not satisfactory to them, seem to have reduced their program of purge to these three.

Meanwhile, outside the senatorial primaries, other primaries have had results unfavorable to Mr. Roosevelt's control of the party. In Texas, the most conspicuous of the extreme New Deal Democrats in the House, Mr. Maury Maverick, was defeated. In the same State, an exceptionally able and high-minded Representative, Mr. Hatton W. Sumners, was renominated. Mr. Sumners, although he was in the House, where the court proposal did not come up, had as much to do with the defeat of it as any of the Senators.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a recent address, described a class of persons who fail to go all the way along with him as "yes—but" men. By this phrase he meant men who assent to his objectives but raise questions about his methods. Assayers of the present mood of the people say the people like the "yes—but" Senators. The people share the "yes—but" attitude. They like Mr. Roosevelt and like his objectives—but think he needs the corrective of Senators who exercise independent judgment.

Pawns No Longer

By Barnet Nover

The Peaceful Balkans.

WARS ARE RAGING in Spain and in China. Frontier clashes are now almost a daily occurrence in the corner of Asia where Manchukuo, Korea and Soviet Russia come together. There are ominous tensions in Central Europe. But peace reigns in the Balkans.

Nothing could be more paradoxical. A generation ago the Balkans constituted the most turbulent part of the Old World. "War in the Balkans in the spring," was a familiar prediction. The region had a bitter heritage of violent racial and religious feuds and conflicting national aspirations.

Today, however, Greek and Turk, Serb and Bulgar and Rumanian are living in a state of amity and concord which sets a shining example to the rest of Europe. In the Balkan peninsula, apparently, the dead past has been allowed to bury its dead.

• • • •

UNDER OTHER circumstances than those that prevail in Europe at the present time this should be a cause of general congratulation. What has been done in the Balkans could be done elsewhere on the continent. But it is precisely the fact that in other parts of Europe tensions are rising and war clouds gathering, which explains why the Balkan area is today an oasis of peace.

The story of how and why Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Bulgaria drew together goes back to 1933, to the days when the shadow of Hitler first began to darken the European horizon. But, originally it was not Hitler but Mussolini who was unwittingly responsible for the peace that has since settled over the Balkans.

Suspicious of the League and of the ideal of collective security, the Duce proposed a four-power pact between Italy, Great Britain, Germany and France. The implication was that the task of keeping Europe peaceful was to be taken out of the feeble hands of the League of Nations and turned over to strong hands of the great powers.

Actually the scheme never came into being. But its mere announcement frightened the little nations of the Balkans. They realized only too well that the establishment of a new Concert of Europe would mean their subordination; that in order to save themselves they would have to cling to the coattails of this or that great power even as they had been forced to do before the World War. They preferred the League system which gave them power they had never previously enjoyed. But with the League weakened by the Manchurian fiasco they decided to reinsure themselves by strengthening the fabric of peace in their own bailiwick.

• • • •

THE YEAR 1933 saw a very interesting exchange of visits between the rulers and statesmen of the Balkan countries. Premier Tsaldaris of Greece, following in the footsteps of Venizelos, paid a ceremonial visit to Ankara and was very well received. King Boris of Bulgaria visited Belgrade, capital of a country which, in the first Balkan war had been Bulgaria's ally only soon after to turn against her and deprive her of territory that Bulgaria had won. King Alexander of Yugoslavia returned the call. The Bulgarian monarch also conferred with Carol of Rumania—on a boat in the Danube. The Turkish foreign minister, Tewfik Rushdi Bey, scurried about from capital to capital.

By February, 1934, Yugoslavia, Greece, Turkey and Rumania were ready to do business. They signed a ten-year treaty guaranteeing the security of their respective territories and promising economic co-operation. Bulgaria, still smarting from the Neuilly treaty which had resulted in a reduction of her territory and had deprived her of her freedom to arm, refused to join.

Just short of three years later, however, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia made a separate pact. At the time this was interpreted as a weakening of the Balkan Entente. It was said that in promising not to attack Bulgaria, Yugoslavia had made it more difficult for Greece, Turkey and Rumania to protect their territory against a possible assault by King Boris' kingdom, aided presumably by some great power. But in view of what has since happened it is fair to say that the Bulgar-Yugoslav treaty has proved of constructive value as a bridge between Bulgaria and the Balkan Entente as a whole.

Today, in fact, Bulgaria is potentially if not actually a member of that entente. Probably with the tacit consent of Great Britain, France and Italy, Yugoslavia, Greece, Rumania and Turkey have agreed to interpose no obstacles in the way of Bulgar rearming. Section IV of the Neuilly Treaty is now dead.

• • • •

IT WOULD BE a mistake to assume that all differences between Bulgaria and the four Balkan Entente powers or among the Entente powers themselves have disappeared. This is far from being the case. But these differences are, at the moment, overshadowed by one great common interest and that is not to get sucked into the maelstrom of great power politics.

Every one of these nations has for some time been under very sharp pressure to become a satellite of this or that power. Because of trade, Germany's pull on the Balkans is considerable and this pull is, in certain cases, intensified by other factors.

Gen. Metaxas, the Greek dictator, for instance, is an avowed admirer of Adolf Hitler and glories in the nickname of the "Greek Moltke."

Turkey, on the other hand, is now very well disposed toward Great Britain and France, in the one case because of an $80,000,000 loan and in the other because of the concessions made by France with regard to the Sanjak of Alexandretta. She is also an ally of Russia. Yugoslavia has made peace with Italy. Italy has been a warm supporter of Bulgaria's irredentist ambitions and the Bulgar Queen is a daughter of the King of Italy.

It is doubtful, however, if any of these nations has any desire to become the tail either of a German-Italian or of a British-French kite. They want to steer a safe course between these combinations, joining neither and antagonizing neither. They may not succeed. They may, sooner or later, become the victims of pressure they cannot withstand. But there is certainly more of a chance to avoid such a catastrophe by standing together than by permitting the great powers to capitalize their ancient differences and play one against the other. They have learned the lession that the League taught but could not practice, that in union there is strength.

The Once Over

Letters Between A Plane And A Flier.

Dear Doug: Well, am I sore! You having the time of your life with parties, tours and everything and me all tied up in knots on a freighter! Wasn't there an old poem about it being offay to dissemble your love, but why did you kick her downstairs?

We're pals, we're buddies, we go everywhere together; I top everything off by carrying you across the Atlantic Ocean, and what do I get? I got a sawing-a-woman-in-half act!

What's it all about? PEGGY.

• • • •

Dear Peg: You got me all wrong. If I had you here I would dish all these parties and feel lots happier than I do now. You know I love you. DOUG.

• • • •

Dear Doug: How do I know you love me? All I know is that I am in five or six pieces spread all over a freight boat and ache all over. I couldn't have been in much worse shape if I had crashed taking off from Long Island. And you in the pink, all dressed up to kill, being received by ambassadors! If you love me, why ain't you with me? PEGGY.

• • • •

Dear Peg: Listen. You got to be reasonable. It ain't my doings at all that you are on that freighter in a half dozen pieces. If I could fly you back you should know I would have done it. They wouldn't let me do it. I put you on that freighter for your own good and I will be seeing you soon. Lots of love. DOUG.

• • • •

Dear Doug: They wouldn't let you fly me from New York to Dublin, but you did it. And what's that baloney about me being on this tub for my own good? PEG.

• • • •

Dear Peggy: You have got to accept my word. When I see you I will explain all. I put you on the freighter because it was the best way to protect you and get you back home with the least taking apart. If I could be with you I would be right in your lap as usual. I love you more than ever. DOUG.

• • • •

Dear Doug: I feel better, but are you sure there is nobody else? PEG.

• • • •

Dear Peggy: After all you and I have been through how could you ask a question like that? Do you think I am a man or a weasel? I wouldn't swap you for Dublin, De Valera, Dr. Hyde, Joe Kennedy's mansion or a pardon from the aviation authorities. DOUG.

• • • •

Dear Doug: You are a weasel if you let anybody call me an old crate any more. I keep reading those headlines. And what's this rumor about you putting me in some stuffy old museum? PEG.

• • • •

Dear Peggy: If you are an old crate I am a horsecar driver. Don't be silly. That museum stuff is only an idea, and anyhow, it won't be stuffy. DOUG.

• • • •

Dear Doug: Stuffy or not, that museum stuff is out. It gives me the creeps. Write me at once that I am not to be locked up after all these years. PEG.

• • • •

Dear Peggy: I don't want you locked up in no museum, but they all tell me it is a great honor to a plane to be locked up like that. And now don't worry. DOUG.

• • • •

Dear Doug: To hell with the honor. All I want is you . . . just you and a different hangar every week . . . you and those days over the plains and mountains . . . those nights among the stars. I want to go places like we always did together. I want you fussing over me . . . YOU and no museum janitor! This is final. PEG.

• • • •

Dear Peggy: You win. Gee, did that last letter make me sentimental! Am coming home and will be with you as soon as possible. Nix on the museums. I am more nuts over you than ever. I had a wonderful dream last night. In it I licked 64 newspapermen who called you a crate. They are still unconscious . . . in the dream, anyhow. Trust me as always.

Your own ever loving, gallivanting gadabout gossoon, whatever that is. DOUG.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

No. 90 Church street, New York City, is the destination of more than 100 Internal Revenue workers here, who will form the New York division of the technical staff in the broad decentralization program, which includes division offices in Chicago, San Francisco and the Pacific Northwest. They are pleased, mostly, at the New York assignment; most of those slated for transfer have interests in these parts and few wanted to be removed as far as the West Coast.

Timothy Mooney, head of the Conference Division of the Tax Unit here, will head the New York Division, and Eldon O. Hanson, of Washington, will be the division counsel.

In making recent lists of transfers to the West Coast division, the Bureau officials said that care was taken to select personnel entirely on the basis of skill and to select those who would feel the leave-taking least. The long list of those tentatively assigned is as follows:

Virgil Bean and Henry L. Young, senior technical advisers; John E. Beeton, administrative assistant; Kenneth L. Nelson, Freeman R. Paulson, George F. Towers, George W. Huntington, John W. Hallowell, J. J. Beirne, Louis Bergman, Charles R. Turner, Paul C. Golding, Arthur D. Furlong, Robert T. Gahagan, Charles R. Culligan and Roy K. Srygley, technical advisers . . .

Benjamin M. Shour, John J. Clancy, Hubert F. Tietman, Jerome G. Kaufman, Arthur Symons, John H. Frishett, Percy S. Gray, Webster N. Jackson, Leroy V. Hartley, Edward B. Wagner, William S. Donaldson, Ralph M. Horne, Paul J. Ashe, H. Warren Smith, Charles O. Pierce and Joel P. Moore, assistant technical advisers . . .

J. F. Phelan, chief reviewer; G. W. Taylor, reviewing auditor . . .

Claire H. Allen, Edna A. Conter, Mabel Johnson, Clara S. Leming, Ethel A. Buesing, Jean Talmadge, Nellie L. Fair, Stella M. Harrigan, Esther R. Henderson, Ellamarie Peterson, Alice B. Dowd, Norma E. Bradford, Frances M. Noel, Mary O. Glenn, Margaret Frances Zundt, Helen Wolford and Jane Kensinger, secretaries . . .

Dorothy A. Brooks, Lillian Sommer, Elizabeth Cain, Rita E. Cartin and Charlotte L. Pratt, typists; Nettie M. Kanost, files supervisor, and Cora G. Rhodes, assistant files supervisor . . .

Grace Bratton, clerk; Jean Gehrman, comptometer operator; Martin T. Garry, Flora Garrett and Irving Fish, clerks; Dorothy L. Smith, information clerk; Henry A. McDowell and Roscoe J. Christian, messengers . . .

Edner C. Algire, assistant division counsel; W. Frank Gibbs, Frank M. Thompson, jr., and John R. Wheeler, group heads; Allen T. Akin, Benjamin M. Brodsky, Francis S. Gettle, Sidney U. Hiken, Clay C. Holmes, James R. Johnston, Conway N. Kitchen, Thomas H. Lewis, jr., James C. Maddox, Walt Mandry, Harold F. Noneman, Loren P. Oakes, George R. Sherriff, Leonard A. Spalding and Harold D. Thomas, assistant counsel . . .

U. F. W. A. Local 1, WPA, writes that the road to general salary increases for hundreds of improperly classified WPA employes (blocked for two years) is now open. Deputy Administrator Aubrey Williams "has agreed to proposals advanced by the Local that salary adjustments upward be considered immediately for employes doing work of a more responsible nature than their present classification and salary call for." Lists of improper classification cases will be given Williams by the Union and these will be reviewed for adjustment, it was asserted.

The Union said there were several hundred cases in WPA at the present, and many of these of long standing. In one instance, a worker received a $1,620 appointment two years ago and has since been advanced by stages to a highly responsible $2,600 job without any increase in salary.

Williams said that only a matter of legal interpretation of the June 25 executive orders now stands between WPA employes and civil service status. The Union proposes a program of job analysis and reclassification procedure to bring WPA into readiness for civil service when the orders are put in effect.

Puerto Rico Court Upholds Limit on Corporate Holding

San Juan, Puerto Rico, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Supreme Court today upheld a statute restricting ownership of land by agricultural corporations to 500 acres. The decision was considered of far-reaching effect on the island's sugar industry.

The court fined Rubert Hermanos, Inc., $3,000 and directed the company to dissolve and dispose of its 12,188 acres of sugar plantations.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

'Sophistication Is Attribute of Highest Desirability to Most Young Persons,' Says Girl of 23.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am in the same plight as "Confused," who asked in your column of July 24, "What constitutes proper social behavior between men and women?" I belong so completely to the same category of social inexperience that I read your reply with avidity to see what I could learn. But I am frankly disappointed in what you had to offer. It sounded like something the girl's own mother might have said, and what we socially inexperienced girls most value is the sympathetic assistance of a contemporary—contemporary in attitude as well as in age.

• • • •

You say "the best social technique is an attitude of sincere and unaffected good will toward all mankind." This has little meaning and certainly offers little help to the girl who would have more men friends . . . And as for your contention that the most magnetic personalities are eminently simple and natural, I do not agree. My own experience has proved the contrary. I have always displayed, and still do, at 23, what "Confused" very aptly terms, "untimely naivete." And I have had it straight from the lips of men that they do not care particularly for my brand of openness and simplicity. . .

• • • •

Lastly, there is that whole train of thought which you evoke in mentioning that indefinable something called "sophistication." I'm amazed to discover that your idea of sophistication, apparently, consists of smoking with long cigarette holders and looking or acting bored when someone suggests a trip to Glen Echo. Really, Mary Haworth, how can you say that "a girl of 23 has no business being excessively worldly wise?" I think most intelligent young persons will agree with me that sophistication (whether or not they can arrive at a precise definition of the term) is an attribute of the highest desirability. P. S.: Why don't you devote a column sometime to a discussion of "What is sophistication?"

UNHELPED.

'Savoir Faire' Is Preferable.

DEAR UNHELPED: There is not much point in my devoting a column to discussing, "What is sophistication?" when Webster's dictionary defines it quite succinctly as "a state of being without directness, simplicity or naturalness;" and tells us that one who is sophisticated is one "experienced in . . . the more artificial phases of life." And if that state is one of "highest desirability," I'll eat the paper on which this column is printed.

• • • •

It occurs to me that you may be confusing "sophistication" with "savoir faire," which means "a knowing how to do; ability; tact." Naivete, for those who take their language straight, means "the quality of being ingenuous," and when we turn to ingenuous, we find that it means, "of a noble character . . . free from dissimulation." And if that isn't a better basis on which to develop savoir faire than sophistication could ever be, then I'll eat the column adjoining this.

• • • •

Moreover, where you confuse "sophistication" with "savoir faire" in your own mind, you make the further mistake of supposing I confuse it with "blase" in my vocabulary, as witness your statement that "(my) idea of sophistication, apparently, consists of smoking with long cigarette holders and looking or acting bored when someone suggests a trip to Glen Echo." The word blase, in case you are as unlettered in the A-B-C's of social interchange, means, "having the sensibilities deadened by excess of enjoyment; surfeited."

• • • •

Now, to return to "savoir faire." If you will study the implications of the phrase, you will readily see that "tact" is the one personal attribute above all others really indispensable to enduring social success. The dictionary defines tact as "sensitive mental perception; nice discernment of the best course of action under given conditions; esp., ability to deal with others without giving offense."

• • • •

If my remarks to "Confused" were so abstract as to have "little meaning" for you, it was because her problem was abstractly presented, and hence invited a reply in kind. To have broken down her problem into its component parts, and to have answered it accordingly, with painstaking analysis and specific suggestion, would have required the space—and the time—ordinarily devoted to the compilation of a book or a series of books covering both the subject of etiquette and the subject of personality development.

• • • •

It is not within the province of this department to undertake, in the space of one short column, the complete social re-education of an individual. That responsibility properly belongs to the individual himself; and should be essayed through the joint mediums of study and practical application of theories thus evolved. Personality, in essence, is the sum total of natural qualities refined and perfected by actual experience.

• • • •

In the final analysis, there is only one way for the socially inexperienced person to overcome his social inadequacy, and that is by embracing every opportunity for contacting his fellow men and thus gradually developing a progressively satisfactory technique for dealing with them. He must learn by doing, after the fashion of modern, so-called "progressive" educational methods. It is mistaken effort, a waste of time, to seek here or there, from this or that person, a magic formula for social success. There is no set of inflexible rules covering "proper social behavior between men and women."

• • • •

The person who possesses genuine "savoir faire," which has its roots in sensitive, responsive intelligence, will always be found adjusting his reactions nicely to the circumstances and the individual. Having learned and forgotten (i.e., committed to his subconscious), the primary rules of etiquette which obtain in conventionalized society, he will thereafter let his tact and common sense dictate the mode of behavior suitable to the situation. Incidentally, both you and "Confused" might profit by reading Emily Post's "Etiquette: The Blue Book of Social Usage," and Margery Wilson's "Your Personality and God." The one book discusses accepted, superficial forms of social behavior, with glancing references to their underlying implications, whereas the other book attempts the mighty task of civilizing the spirit, of investing the soul with poise.

M. H.

Fitted Jackets Give Youthful Effect

HERE are two youthful, perky ensembles for late summer and early fall, both featuring the fitted jacket. The outfit below is of silk rayon twilled fabric with dark background and white motif. The jacket is in demure basque effect. The skirt has pleats to give it a carefree swing. The fetching twisted turban is of the same material.

THE TRIM tailored suit above is of heavy lace in a sturdy conventionally patterned weave that tailors as beautifully as wool. The skirt has pleats front and back and the little short-sleeved jacket is fitted at the waist and has high-placed breast pockets.

Working Hard, Playing Hard Secret of Miss Dewson's Energy

Member of Social Security Board Won Tennis Tournament at 54; Advocates Vigorous Outdoor Exercise for Career Women at Desks.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHEN WE look at some of these veteran career women who are still going at 60, we just marvel. How do they do it? What is the secret of their amazing energy, their unlimited ability to get an endless number of big things done?

If we were to ask Miss Mary W. Dewson, member of the Social Security Board, for a formula, she would probably say, "Work hard and play hard." Most of us would not know what she meant, for the modern career girl still has a lot to learn if she is to make her success last. She knows all about hard work—but she has not learned to play.

Miss Dawson is one of the few successful career women who really balances work with recreation, and play to her is outdoor activity of the most vigorous type. This remarkable woman has been working steadily since 1897, and it is my contention that any of you who want to succeed in a difficult career would be wise to adopt some such plan of work and play.

Likes Play Like Work.

Miss Dewson likes hunting and fishing, but what she really enjoys is the kind of play that sound like work. A few months ago she laid the rocks in the driveway at her place in Connecticut.

"And I want to tell you that I can drive a nail, too," says Miss Dewson. "Last year I built a house for the pigs—the men put up four posts for me, but I built the house and I had to be pretty careful and use the hammer right because the men didn't seem to think I could do it. It was a nice little house and the pigs liked it."

Do you begin to see what she means by play? Golf may be more in your line, and she plays golf, too. "But I don't really like it," she says. "I like tennis. I think the most fun I ever had was in winning a tennis tournament—which was something of a comfort at the age of 54. It was only a little tournament, but I think the reason I was able to win was that as I sat on the sidelines waiting to play I heard one of the youngsters say of me, "Just keep her on the run and that will fix her!"

Flee Routine.

Don't stick too close to your career. In the summer, get as completely away from your routine work as possible. Do something entirely different. If you work in the city, try to get out on a farm for week-ends or for your vacation, and get the physical exercise you need.

This is the kind of program followed by a woman who knows all about the working conditions of women in this country, who is credited with much of the improvement in working hours and wages, and who has found the secret of managing her own career successfully. Do you think you will have as much energy and drive as she has when you are 20 years older?

Sift 1½ cups granulated sugar and 1 cup pastry flour separately 3 times before measuring. Add half the sugar to the flour and 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon cloves, and ½ teaspoon nutmeg. Beat 1¼ cups egg whites until stiff, add rest of sugar and beat lightly. Fold in flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon vanilla and ½ teaspoon almond extract. Beat lightly and pour into ungreased loaf pan. Bake for 25 minutes in a slow oven (275 degrees). Increase heat slightly and bake for 30 minutes in a moderately slow oven (325 degrees). Invert pan until cake has cooled and then carefully remove it.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, August 1.

HO, HUM! I guess we shouldn't complain, since it seems to be an international plague, but that war is on again. The invading army of Japanese beetles is greater than ever this year, and every leaf and flower in the metropolitan area is at the mercy of these winged despoilers! Scientists and professional bug battlers are doing their darnedest, but the beetles are gaining on all fronts, and not a penthouse on Park avenue can rear so much as a begonia! Ah, tragedy!

ALICE HUGHES

The learned Dr. B. O. Dodge, plant pathologist at our Bronx gardens, says the curse lies in the rapidity with which the pesky bugs multiply. Every mamma beetle lays 60 eggs this month—and within two weeks the babies are full-fledged killers before whom no blade of grass is safe. Gardens and lawns all over the countryside are being laid bare—even Mr. Rockefeller's sacred gardens in Radio City are being bombarded. Our gallant Army post at Governors Island has no weapons with which to fight them, and Mrs. Lieut. Buzzfuzz's pansy bed is no safer than the plot tended by any little old lady in the Bronx.

Kiddies are being paid bounties for trapping the villains. Wise men advise spraying everything with arsenate of lead; others say this doesn't help. New Jersey, of course, is in worse case. It usually is, somehow. The erudite Doc Fleming, who works for the Government, is Jersey's general of the anti-Jap beetle army. He says that a certain brand of wasp can whip them, but so far he has only 150,000 troops to fight countless millions of bugs. All looks lost! "Winged Death From the Skies Desolates Nation!" scream the newspapers! What we need is more battleships, I suppose.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Doris Duke Cromwell, that rich girl with all the money and the blonde hair, certainly believes in keeping busy and out of the newspapers—which might be turned into a mean comparison. At any rate, she's working for the State of New Jersey (without pay), is being a wife to Jimmy Cromwell (neither count nor prince) and is filling in the chinks by taking singing lessons from Doris Tauber, of here. Wonder if it is true that she's taken a film test on the Coast?

• • • •

On the matter of warbling, who should be starring in the floor show at the thrilling Riviera night club over on the Jersey Palisades at the far end of the Washington Bridge, but dear old Helen Morgan, complete with piano, twisted hanky, and "Bill!" Helen is in great form, still the Unshed Tear of Show Business with the throb in the lower notes.

• • • •

Under all the New York flummery and chi-chi, big things always go on. While the town was swarming and hollering about various young men who had flown across oceans on box kites, Mayor LaGuardia and Senator Wagner were turning the first spoonful of earth for our great Red Hook housing development—ultimately to furnish modern, airy, low-priced flats for 6,000 families. A mere drop of our millions, perhaps, but a vital beginning of the great American rebuilding that must come if we are to survive. Pardon me. For the first time in years I am a zealot and a maniac, and the drive for re-housing has done it to me!

Hay Fever Victim May Create Own Filtered Climate

By Logan Clendenning, M. D.

For several years I have recommended that boards of health or other Government bodies could practically rid most communities of hay fever by having gangs of laborers destroy hay fever plants. The only place in the country of The only place in the country of which I know where this is done is Kane, Pa., which claims to be a resort where relief from asthma and hay fever is obtained. The borough council of Kane passed an ordinance making it a misdemeanor for property owners to permit growth of weeds on their lots, and this ordinance is strictly enforced. During the summer months the council maintains a "ragweed crew" which eradicates any stray hay fever plant for some distance around the town.

There are many sufferers, however, who cannot afford to take vacations or vaccines, and for them it is possible with a little trouble and slight expense to create a pollen-free sleeping room. This gives quite a lot of relief.

Remove Draperies.

The bedroom should be prepared several days before the advent of the hay fever season. Carpets and any hangings or upholstered furniture which will hold pollen grains should be removed. After that a vacuum cleaner and model mop should go all over the floor and baseboards. Then the windows should be closed.

An air filter or air-conditioning unit can be installed. The air filters fit in the windows. These contain a mechanical pollen filter so that the outside air enters the room after going through several layers of felt or cellulose or spun glass, or other such material. The air can be driven through this by a fan creating a slightly positive air pressure in the room. This positive pressure is an advantage, because it forces air out of the cracks around the doors and windows and drives out pollen grains that are lying there and might blow in.

Homemade Filter.

A home-made apparatus of this kind can be constructed by a fairly ingenious household mechanic. But the cost of the manufactured apparatus is not great—far less than a vacation. Especially a vacation prolonged over the whole hay fever season.

The filters need to be changed every week or so, because they get clogged with pollen. Extra filters can be purchased at a low price.

The bed had best be fitted with allergen-proof sheets, pillow cases, etc. Most department and furniture stores carry a line of these.

My reports are that these air-conditioned rooms give great relief. It is, of course, only at night, but for most hay fever sufferers the night is the worst time.

"You mean Mamie? Honestly, the way that girl's gone up is something I can't understand."

"Me either. And to think of her family. . . ."

"Yes, and old man Marsh driving that laundry wagon."

"I understand she says now he was 'superintendent of delivery.'"

"Say, I've seen him on that laundry wagon with my own eyes. You can't tell me anything about that Marsh family. I've known Mamie ever since we were both knee high to a grasshopper."

"She says she's only 24."

"Now I'll tell one. Mamie Marsh'll never see 30 again."

"Oh, she must be older than that! I remember she was a big girl when I—well, I must have been a baby in long dresses."

"Well, she's at least between 30 and 35. And then look at all the husbands she's had."

"They say she's gone terribly high hat."

"She has. I saw her two years ago when she came home. You should have heard her say 'eyether' and 'nyether.'"

"No!"

"Yes! Well, anyway, I didn't let her put on any airs around me. I just called her 'Mamie' right to her face."

"Where'd she ever get that Marilyn stuff anyway? Everybody knows her grandmother was named 'Mamie'—you knew old Mrs. Mamie Booch?"

"Yes, I remember her. She used to keep boarders."

"Well of course, when you consider Mamie's family, I suppose she does deserve some credit."

"It's all luck! Why, there were lots of girls at home a thousand times better looking than Mamie. I know I was no beauty, and yet——"

"No, and she never was really popular. I know even I——"

"Oh, well, of course she had a following with a certain class."

"Yes and then of course she had lots of nerve."

"Yes and pull—after she once got to Hollywood. That's all it takes out there."

"That's the whole thing! You know any of us might be in her shoes if we'd just made the break!"

"Yes, what is it she's got, after all, when you get down to it?"

"Nothing! You know when I think of Mamie Marsh being where she is today I just think I'm one of the biggest saps in the world."

"Me, too."

Survey Compiles Suggestions for A Perfect Guest

Vacation and travel days have raised the question of what constitutes a perfect guest. The Associated Press has compiled the following suggestions:

Look your best. Nine times out of ten your hostess will want to show you off sometime during your stay.

Don't comment on other guests.

Be helpful, but don't be underfoot when your hostess is very busy.

Don't ever droop into boredom. People who are interesting themselves don't get bored. Tired, yes . . . but that can be remedied by excusing yourself for a little nap.

Do your share of the talking—but no more. There's nothing so tiresome as being forced to witness a one-man show or listen to an overdose of feminine chatter.

Be as attentive as you can. Attention is a very welcome form of flattery—for men, women and children. If your hostess asks you to transfer your attentions, do just that.

Don't scatter your belongings about. Then your hostess won't have to trail you constantly to pick up after you—or mail back what you've left.

Remember those little extra considerations, like folding up the papers neatly after you've read them; wringing out your own bathing suit and hanging it up to dry; turning out lights you don't need.

Lesser Resorts Claim Share of D. C. Society

Most Every Village Along Massachusetts Shore Has Its Quota of Washingtonians; Nantucket Island Sets a Record.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Although Bailey's Beach and Saratoga's race track can boast the biggest array of social lights from Washington this season, some of the smaller, less publicized resorts also have attracted a number of Capital residents who prefer their vacation pursuits to be "far from the madding crowd."

From Massachusetts comes word that you can drop in on almost any village along its shore and find flocks of Washingtonians. Picturesque Nantucket Island—this summer's home for Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed and the Breckinridge Longs—has drawn more colonists from the Capital this year than ever before.

Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, who, with her husband and family, is spending the season at Pine Knoll, Cape Cod, has just returned there from Nantucket, where she was the guest of Mrs. Anderson Smith, of New York. Mrs. Stoddard and her hostess were in the audience at the recent opening of "Candida," at Nantucket's noted summer theater. Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, of Washington, was another on hand for the opening; also, Col. and Mrs. Leslie MacDill, who are summering in Nantucket and who were accompanied to the play by Mrs. MacDill's mother, Mrs. Richard Hamlin, of Boston. Others at the first performance of "Candida" were Mrs. J. Fred Essary and her daughters, Mrs. Samuel Tilden Answell, jr., Miss Peggy Essary, who will make her debut here next season, and Elene Essary.

"Dolly" Gann Enjoying New England Summer

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, "Dolly" to her friends, who long ago gave up precedence battles for petit point embroidery, now is plying her capable needle in New England, dividing her time between Nantucket and other resorts thereabout. When she returns to Washington in September, chances are she will have finished the handsome piece of tapestry on which she has been working most of the summer.

A roving reporter who last week happened to be crossing on the little boat that goes across from Cape Cod to Nantucket, sent me word that her traveling companions were mostly Washingtonians. Mrs. Gann was on board, petit pointing away. Mrs. Stoddard and Mr. and Mrs. Frederic William Wile, who have taken a cottage at Nantucket for the summer, were also making the trip.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Marc Peter are enjoying a quiet summer in Cohasset, Mass., where they will be until after Labor day. Like most villages of its type, Cohasset slumbers through most of the winters and then awakes to a whirl of activity—not strenuous at that—during July and August. Recently, the opening there of Sinclair Lewis' "You Can't Take It With You," in which the author took the leading role, brought out virtually all the season's colonists, including the Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter.

Incidentally, reports from Cohasset have it that the Peters—particularly Mme. Peter—spend hours each day hiking here, there and everywhere. The chatelaine of the Swiss Legation does that in Washington; in fact, she walks more than any two women I know. Incidentally, Minister and Mme. Peter have had with them at their cottage a good part of the summer their two sons and families from Boston.

Lothrop Stoddard to Be Master of Ceremonies at Benefit

Over at West Dennis, Cape Cod, the Lothrop Stoddards have entertained a steady stream of week-end guests ever since they took a house there early in June. Meanwhile, however, Mr. Stoddard has managed to keep pretty close to his writing and has been working on a play for several weeks. He will take time away from his typewriter on August 11, however, to be master of ceremonies at a public library benefit. As part of the program a group of titled Russians, who are summering on Cape Cod, will sing a group of selections and play their balalaikas. Mrs. Stoddard, who once was a top-flight concert singer, will also present a group of Russians songs. According to present plans, the Stoddards will return to Washington in September.

In the nature of a family reunion is the set-up in the summer household of the Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, who are spending the season at Hayannisport, Mass. Joining them regularly for week-ends are Mrs. Woodring's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Greenwood, of Fitchburg, Mass., and former Senator and Mrs. Marcus Coolidge. Mrs. Woodring's parents, are there for the summer. Not until after Labor Day will the Woodrings return to Washington, although the Secretary may make flying trips back now and then to look after affairs at his office.

Mrs. G. D. Ridout Visiting Mother

Lieut. Ridout Transferred From Manila to San Diego, Calif.

Mrs. George D. Ridout, wife of Lieut. Ridout, of the Medical Corps, U. S. Navy, arrived yesterday morning from Manila, P. I., for an extended visit with her mother, Mrs. L. H. Engle, Forest Glen.

Mrs. Ridout, the former Miss Elizabeth Engle, of Washington, left Manila with Lieut. Ridout, who has been transferred to San Diego for duty on June 26 and has been traveling toward home ever since. While they were still at sea, on July 13, Elizabeth Candida Ridout, their small daughter celebrated her second birthday. She was born in the Philippines, where Lieut. Ridout has been on duty for the past 2½ years.

After visiting her family for a month or six weeks, Mrs. Ridout will take her small daughter to Audubon, N. J., to introduce her to her other grandparents, the Rev. and Mrs. George W. Ridout. On the completion of their stay there, Mrs. Ridout and her daughter will leave for the West by the southern route, stopping off for a few days in New Orleans, and will then join Lieut. Ridout in San Diego, where they will make their home.

Mrs. Ridout's sisters, Mrs. Robert Schroeder and Miss Lavinia Engle, are both residents of Washington. Miss Engle is with the Social Security Board. She has long been a leader in Democratic politics in Maryland. The latter part of this week Miss Engle will leave on an extended trip in connection with her work.

Paul Cook to Wed Miss Sheehy Today

St. Martin's Church this morning at 10 o'clock will be the scene of the marriage of Miss Uriel Elizabeth Sheehy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Quade Sheehy, and Paul F. Cook, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. Cook. Mgr. Michael J. Riordan will officiate.

The bride will be given in marriage by her father, and will have for her attendants her sister-in-law, Mrs. Bernard P. Sheehy, as matron of honor; her sister, Miss Monica Ita Sheehy, as maid of honor, and Miss Mary Rita Sheehy, another sister, as bridesmaid.

J. Bernard Cook will be best man, and ushers will include Martin A. Cook, James J. Cook and P. Mitchell Cook, all brothers of the bridegroom, and Edward Walsh Sheehy and Bernard Paul Sheehy, both brothers of the bride.

Among the prenuptial parties given for Miss Sheehy was a luncheon last Saturday at Pierre's, at which Mrs. Carbery O'Shea was hostess. Guests included Mrs. Bernard Sheehy, Miss Monica Sheehy, Miss Mary Sheehy, Mrs. Charles Pierst, Miss Eleanor Rattigan, Miss Marion Rueth and Mrs. Shane McCarthy.

Miss Paula Weeks Becomes Bride of James McF. Taylor

Ceremony at Chevy Chase Home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Weeks Unites Daughter in Marriage With Illinois Man; Couple to Live in Elgin.

At a quiet ceremony yesterday in the Chevy Chase home of the bride's parents, Miss Paula Weeks and James McFarland Taylor were married. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Weeks, of 330 Brookside drive, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ash Taylor, of Forreston, Ill.

The Rev. Duncan Fraser officiated at the noon ceremony, which took place before an improvised altar banked with pine and white gladioli. Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white organza, fashioned with a full skirt, a fitted bodice and puffed sleeves. Her finger-tip veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried an ivory prayer book previously used by her mother and sister.

Mrs. C. S. Weeks Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. C. S. Weeks, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Her frock of turquoise blue silk was made on bouffant lines and she wore with it a white hat. Her flowers were a sheaf of white gladioli.

Arthur Linsey Owen, of New York, was best man. There were no ushers. Following the wedding there was a reception in the garden. Mrs. Weeks, mother of the bride, who stood with the wedding party to greet the guests, was gowned in net trimmed with a flower applique of chiffon.

To Make Home In Elgin, Ill.

Shortly after the reception, the couple started on a honeymoon trip that will include a journey by canoe through Minnesota to Canada. When they left, the bride was attired in a light gray tailored suit with white accessories. Upon the conclusion of their Canadian sojourn, Mr. and Mrs. Taylor will make their home at 1191 Logan avenue, Elgin, Ill.

The former Miss Weeks attended the Madeira School, George Washington University, and the University of Illinois, from which she received her bachelor's degree this year. Mr. Taylor was a student at the University of Wisconsin and De Pauw University before attending the University of Illinois, from which he was graduated in June, 1937.

Of interest here was the marriage of Miss Margaret Therese Moore and Dr. Maurice Joseph Costello, in New York, Saturday.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Robert Moore of New York, while Dr. Costello is the son of Mrs. Maurice P. Costello, also of New York. With the Rev. Francis Kelly officiating, the ceremony was solemnized at 11 o'clock. Miss Katherine L. Fay was the bride's only attendant, and Francis J. Costello was his brother's best man.

Dr. Costello, widely known in Washington, was graduated from Georgetown University and Georgetown University Medical School. He and his bride, who are now on a wedding trip to Maine, will make their home in New York.

Mary E. Osborn Is Visitor Here

To Spend 10 Days More With Freudenthals at Bolling Field.

Lieut. and Mrs. Wilhelm C. Freudenthal, of Bolling Field, have as their house guest Miss Mary Elizabeth Osborn, daughter of Commander and Mrs. Charles F. Osborn, of the Brooklyn Navy Yard. Miss Osborn, who has been here a week, expects to remain another ten days. Washington is not strange to her, as she attended school at the Immaculata Seminary while her father was stationed with the Navy Department.

Mrs. Freudenthal was Miss Kathryn Westover, daughter of the Chief of the Army Air Corps and Mrs. Oscar Westover. She spent a number of years in Washington before her marriage and attended both Western High School and Immaculata Seminary, where she and Miss Osborn were classmates. Lieut. Freudenthal was graduated from West Point in 1935.

Mary E. Kincaid To Become Bride Of Elbert Harris

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Kincaid announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Ellen Kincaid, and Elbert Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Marshall Harris, of Roanoke, Va.

The wedding will take place late next month. The bride-elect is well known in sporting circles, having formerly been a golf champion. She attended school in Washington.

Mr. Harris, who was educated at George Washington University, is assistant buyer at a local department store.

Marjorie Olson Is Bride Of Andrew M. Knappen

Announcement is made of the wedding on Saturday evening, July 30, of Miss Marjorie Mary Olson and Andrew Macfarlane Knappen. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett at All Souls' Memorial Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Robert Bruce Olson, of Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Mr. Knappen, who was graduated in June from the Harvard School of Business Administration, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore M. Knappen, of this city. The couple will reside at 2025 Tilden street.

Author's Daughter Here.

Miss Marjorie Butler, of New York, daughter of the late Ellis Parker Butler, is the guest of her cousin, Miss Ardis Smith, for a week. One of twin daughters, she was a source of inspiration for a number of her father's humorous stories. He is best remembered by his "Pigs Is Pigs."

Col. John Crane, Daughters to Return Today

Will Remain at Fort Myer Till Aug. 22, Then Move to Arlington Home.

Col. John Alden Crane, accompanied by Miss Mary McKim Crane and Lizetta Violet Crane, will return to his quarters at Fort Myer today after a month's vacation in North Hatley, Province of Quebec, Canada.

They will join Mrs. Crane at Fort Myer to remain until August 22 when they will move to their house in Arlington, Va. Col. Crane recently was transferred from the Army post to the War Department, where he will serve as foreign liaison officer with the military intelligence staff.

His daughter, Miss Crane, was a popular debutante last season, when she made her bow at the Bachelor's Cotillion in Baltimore. Lizetta, 12-year-old foster daughter of Col. and Mrs. Crane, returned with them from Turkey. Col. Crane was military attache at the American Embassy there before going to Fort Myer for station.

Grandchildren Pay Mr. and Mrs. Albers Brief Visit at Home

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Albers have as their guests, their daughter, Mrs. Joe Earman and her three children, Joe Henry, Georgeanne and William, who arrived Saturday from their home in Vero Beach, Fla. They will be here for several days before going on to Blue Ridge Summit, Va., to spend the remainder of the summer.

Also the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Albers is the latter's niece, Mrs. Tony Miller, of Columbus, Ohio, who arrived in Washington yesterday after spending some time in Ocean City, Md. Upon concluding her visit here, she will go directly to her home in Columbus.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander V. Dye expect to leave Washington for a motor trip on Thursday and will be away about three weeks. Mr. Dye is director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The Dyes have no special plans, except that they will head up to Cape Cod, along the Massachusetts coast, and expect to get as far as Maine. However, it is to be a sort of "Gypsy trip," and as they both will take their golf clubs along, they will stop at all the places that offer good golfing.

• • • •

A number of Washington residents have received cards from Mrs. Mead Moore announcing the marriage of her daughter, the former Miss Emily Maitland Moore, and Elbridge Durbrow, on Saturday, July 23, in London.

Inclosed with the announcement is a card indicating that Mr. and Mrs. Durbrow will be at home after August 15 at Villa Cottrau, Naples, Italy.

Saunderses Arrive Today to Visit the Archambeaults Here

Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Saunders and Miss Aldean Saunders, of New York, will arrive today to visit Commander Charles P. Archambeault, U. S. N., and Mrs. Archambeault. Mr. Saunders and Miss Saunders are the brother and sister of Mrs. Archambeault.

Next week Commander Archambeault will leave for Long Beach, Calif., accompanied by Mrs. Archambeault. She will be located there while he is on duty with the U. S. S. Arizona on the West Coast.

Mrs. Fleming, Twins In Virginia for Month

Mrs. Irwin Fleming and her twin daughters, the Misses Nancy and Sally Fleming, of Washington, have arrived at Montrose, the home of Mrs. Randolph Turner near The Plains, Va., and will spend the month of August there.

According to present plans, the Misses Fleming will make their debut in the Capital this winter. They expect to return to Washington in September.

Sets Date

Underwood & Underwood.
MISS CONSTANCE MARETA NASH
has selected Friday, September 9, as the date of her marriage to Edward Harry Drake Gibbs. She is the daughter of Raymond E. Nash, and the prospective bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Harry Drake Gibbs and the late Dr. Gibbs. The National Christian Church will be the scene of the wedding, which is scheduled for 4:30 o'clock.

Otakar Kakelacs To Leave Today

Retiring Czechoslovak Aide and Wife Off for Prague via New England.

The retiring First Secretary of the Czechoslovak Legation and Mme. Otakar Kabelac expect to leave Washington today for a brief visit in New England. On August 11 they will sail for Europe, going directly to Prague, where Mr. Kabelac will be on duty in the foreign office.

Last summer Mr. Kabelac vacationed in his homeland, returning with a bride. They have made their home at Alban Towers during the past year.

• • • •

Mr. and Mrs. Bonifacio C. Bernardes, of Brazil, are visiting Washington for a few days and staying at the Woodley Inn. Mr. Bernades is making a survey of rice growing in the United States for the Rice Institute in Brazil. Incidentally this is located in the State of Rio Grande de Sol, the native State of Oswaldo Aranha, formerly Brazilian Ambassador here and now Foreign Minister.

Having already visited United States experimental stations for growing rice in Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, Mr. and Mrs. Bernades plan next to visit the stations in California. Mr. Bernades himself is one of the foremost planters in his home State.

• • • •

Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, who make their home on Seminary Hill, Alexandria, left Saturday for a motor trip through New England and Canada. They expect to be away four weeks.

Mrs. Macondray's three young daughters accompanied them. The two younger daughters, Miss Helen Tucker Andrew and Miss Carter Randolph Andrew will stop off at Nantucket. The older daughter, Miss Mary Lloyd Andrew, will visit at Cape Cod. On their return from Canada, Commander and Mrs. Macondray will stop off at Cape Cod before returning to Washington.

Sailing Tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rigby, of Birmingham, England, who spent several days recently at the Shoreham, will sail tomorrow for England on the Aquitania. They came to this country primarily to visit Mr. Rigby's sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Bland, in Minneapolis.

Lucie Waring Becomes Bride Of John Hicks

In the presence of relatives and a few close friends, Miss Lucie Waring, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dabney Taliaferro Waring, of Alexandria, yesterday morning became the bride of John Ryan Hicks, son of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Hicks, of Mineola, Long Island.

The Rev. Henry Lee Doll, of Christ Church, Alexandria, officiated at the 11 o'clock ceremony, which took place in the Belle Haven home of Mr. and Mrs. Waring. Dabney T. Waring, jr., brother of the bride, played the wedding music.

Sister Serves As Attendant

Allen Beatty, of New York, was best man, and there were no ushers. Immediately following the wedding ceremony there was a breakfast with the bride's parents as host and hostess. Mrs. Waring was gowned in blue and white georgette made on simple lines. Palms and summer blossoms decorated the dining room.

When the couple left on the wedding trip, Mrs. Hicks wore an olive green wool frock with brown accessories. She and the bridegroom left by plane for New York and will go from there to New England to spend their honeymoon. They will make their home in Mineola.

Several Guests From Out of Town

Among the out of town guests at the wedding were Mrs. B. C. Walker, of Raleigh, N. C.; W. L. Waring, of Tampa, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Miller, of Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Markert, jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Norbert Melnick, of Arlington; Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Hawkins and Miss Lucille Boyd, of Washington; Lieut. and Mrs. Beverly Montgomery, of Langley Field, and Mrs. Robert Waring and Miss Lucie Waring, of Remo, Va.

D. A. R.'s Junior Citizens' Program Helps 80,000 Children Nationally

Mrs. Barnes Opens Ninth Year as National Vice Chairman.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Seventy-five children of Green County, Va., are doing gardening this summer and the families from which they come are assured food next winter because of the Junior American Citizen program of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Miss Elizabeth Malott Barnes, recently reappointed by Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general, to serve for the ninth consecutive year as national vice chairman of the Junior American Citizen committee, is in charge of the Eastern Division, including Virginia.

Last January, Mrs. Ruby Ruebush, a community worker, came to Washington to enlist interest of the D. A. R. in the children of Wyatt Mountain and Bacon Hollow. The Wyatt Mountain School had not been open for five years and the children not only had no education but were without food and clothing, she said. With a little help they could be given all three.

Miss Barnes, with the aid of Mrs. Lucy Day, of Arlington, State chairman for Virginia, collected $20 with which a supply of canned goods was purchased at wholesale. This, supplemented occasionally by cabbage and other fresh vegetables which Mrs. Ruebush was able to obtain, provided daily lunches for the 75 children from January to April.

They are organized in two groups, one comprised of those who live in the hollow and the other of those on the mountain, with Mrs. Ruebush as their leader. Under her direction they cleaned the school and put it in shape for use. They were given clothing collected and sent by the D. A. R. and the daily school lunches transformed them from hungry, undernourished children to normal, healthy ones.

Harris & Ewing.

MISS ELIZABETH MALOTT BARNES, who is serving her ninth consecutive year as a national vice chairman of the Junior American Citizens' Committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Co-operation Given In Garden Plan

With this beginning as a result of organizing the Junior American Citizens Clubs there, the boys and girls and their grateful parents were ready to co-operate wholeheartedly in the garden project inaugurated as soon as school was out. Seeds and garden tools were provided for the people of the section and, under supervision of Mrs. Ruebush, the children also undertook to make gardens of their own, on a tract of which they were given the use without charge.

They have been working faithfully, raising vegetables for summer use and to put up for the fall. Mrs. Ruebush has also assisted the women in canning their surplus produce, part of it for themselves and part for the school to be used for lunches. It is the first time in many seasons there have been gardens in this section. The people have been too poor to buy either seeds or tools and have had no way to help themselves.

The project in Green County is an example of the program carried on throughout the country by the Junior American Citizens Committee, always stressing the idea of helping people to help themselves. The work, which was started at Cincinnati in 1902 with a club of 17 children, is designed to reach young people who are not eligible for membership in the National Society, Children of the American Revolution. The committees adapt activities to the needs of each community but always emphasizes patriotism and responsibility for achievement. D. A. R. members engaged in the work endeavor to give the children advantages they would not otherwise have; see that they are cared for in case of illness, that they have proper clothing and feel the security of friends to whom they may turn in time of need.

"You're just like another mother," one grateful youngster said to Miss Barnes recently. Just the other night, a small boy in one of the Washington clubs telephoned her at 10 o'clock to tell her between sobs that his dog had been run over and ask what he should do.

Aid Members In Their Careers

Many boys and girls, through the encouragement and help they have received, have been able to launch on successful careers. One young man, not yet 21, who is head of the accounting department of a large firm here, traces his success to membership in one of the Junior American Citizens clubs. His first visit to the club was as a freckled faced little fellow, there to play pranks, Miss Barnes recalled. She decided to give him an office in order to gain his interest; made him treasurer and he was a loyal member from then on. When he told her he planned to stop school to take a job as a doorman, she persuaded him to continue his education and interested a faculty member of a school of accountancy in him with the result that he was given a position in the office of the school so he could work his way through. He was an outstanding student and now holds a responsible executive position.

Another boy of whom the local committee is proud is Howard A. MacCord, who next fall will enter American University. He went to the club first because he heard the D. A. R. sent boys to camp. He was among those who went the next summer—to Port Tobacco, Md. While there he found Indian arrows and, on a later trip, an Indian burying ground which was considered of much importance by the Smithsonian Institution.

Many Being Sent To Camp This Year

Mrs. William Wagner is chairman of the Junior American Citizens Committee in the District of Columbia which this year is sending 70 children to camp, the boys to the Boys Club Camp and the girls to Holiday House. There are 80,000 Junior American Citizens' members in the country, aided through voluntary contributions of D. A. R. chapters.

Miss Barnes never missed a meeting of one of the local clubs while she was State chairman for the District. She began her service as national vice chairman when Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart was president general and was reappointed by Mrs. William Russell Magna, Mrs. William A. Becker and then by Mrs. Robert. She is also an active member of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington and of the Political Study Club.

Musicale Postponed at Clubhouse Event; Miss Murray to Play Later.

The Monday tea yesterday at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women was a pleasant party despite the fact that the musicale which had been planned was postponed because of the illness of the artist, Miss Catherine Murray. The club will present her in the piano program she was to have given yesterday at one of its subsequent teas.

The hostess was Miss Lucy J. Hunt, assisted by Mrs. W. C. Harlee, Miss Sara Abbott, who poured, and Mrs. Ernest Correll. Mrs. Lawrence Radford, membership chairman, assisted in receiving.

The tea table was arranged in the lounge, with a centerpiece of garden flowers in shades of pink. The redecorating of the clubhouse is now finished and the guests were interested in looking into the rooms just completed.

At the Monday program next week, the club hopes to present Miss Murray; on the following Monday, Miss Eleanor Berge will give a program of songs and, August 22, Miss Don O'Dell Moore will sing. On August 29, Miss Amy L. Veerhoff, a member of the yearbook committee o the club and who is active in the Little Theater movement in Washington, will give dramatic readings.

The teas will continue until October, when the first organized program will be held and the committees start functioning. Mrs. Robert L. Olesen, the club president, will not return home from Europe until after the middle of September. Mrs. Duaward Sandifer, first vice president, who has been serving during Mrs. Olesen's absence, is now on her vacation and while she is away Mrs. L. M. Fuller is in charge of the programs.

Among those at the tea yesterday were Miss Sara P. Grogan, Miss Emily Newell, Mrs. Thomas Heitz, Mrs. Noble Boaz, Miss Erma Brown, Miss Coralie Shubert, Mrs. Edmund Campbell, Mrs. E. E. Colbert, Miss Margaret Pittman, Miss Alice Jewell, Miss Virginia Kinnard, who is in charge of the junior bridge group; Mrs. Laura Silsby, Miss Grace Prisk, Mrs. Catherin Doherty and Miss Myrl Rhine.

Rural Youth Alliance Making D. C. Job Study

Guidance Group Seeks to Know if Work Is Available, and What Kind.

The Washington Branch of the Alliance for the Guidance of Rural Youth, of which Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle is president, is now in the midst of a survey to determine the occupational and instructional adjustment of rural youth coming here for work.

Today there will be a meeting of the committee engaged in research on the question, at which Dr. O. Latham Hatcher, national president, will be present. This will be the third time she has come from headquarters in Richmond to take part in committee conferences. Mrs. Doyle also is assisting the committee, of which Miss Helen Samuel is chairman. Other members are Dr. Bruce Melvin and Mrs. Cyril Smith. John Lang, who has been aiding in the work, as recording secretary of the Washington organization, has just been appointed National Youth Administrator for North Carolina, his native State, and has gone there to assume his duties.

The committee expects to be ready to report on the progress of the survey when the Washington Branch resumes its meetings in October. It seeks to answer such questions as: What happens to the boy or girl who comes to Washington from a rural area looking for work? Does he get it? If so, what kind of a job, and is he adequately prepared?

The answers to these questions are expected to be an assistance to youth and to the educators who are concerned with their training. The committee working on the survey is being assisted by the WPA. Similar surveys are to be undertaken in Richmond and New York City.

The Washington Branch also is co-operating with other youth-serving agencies in the organization of a guidance co-ordination council in the District to effect a closer tie-up between their counseling, guidance and placement facilities. This is the outcome of a suggestion made last winter at a meeting addressed by Mrs. Henry A. Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, and an interested member of the organization.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

MARGARET LUTZ, of Jamestown, N. Dak., who has come to Washington to assist with the work of the Peoples Mandate Committee, has just returned from a trip to Egypt and the Near East, Palestine, Syria and Irak.

Miss Lutz said the highlight of her trip was a visit to the excavations of ancient civilizations now being made by archeologists at Ur and Beersheba.

"At Ur one can still walk the ancient streets and visit the houses of Abraham's city," she said. "We met Sir Leonard Wooley, who made the excavations there under the direction of the British Museum and the University of Pennsylvania. He explained that the Ur excavations furnish a complete picture of the ancient civilizations. Unusually rich treasures of gold and jewels were found in the 'Death Pit' of one of the Kings of Ur which he uncovered.

"We also had tea with Sir Flinders and Lady Petrie at the 'dig' outside of Beersheba and heard from Sir Flinders that traces of the earliest civilization ever uncovered will likely be found there."

• • • •

ON THE NILE, Miss Lutz visited the ancient temples of the Pharaohs, the beautiful temples at Luxor and went into the Valley of the Kings to see Tutankahmen's tomb and the Temple of Karnak.

Miss Lutz is a graduate of Stephens College at Columbia, Mo., has done work at the University of Minnesota, and in the fall will enter the Law School of the University of Chicago to prepare for the practice of law in juvenile courts. While she is here working with the Mandate Committee at its headquarters in the Hay-Adams Miss Lutz is the guest of Miss Sheldon Jackson at the Concord Apartments.

MAE HELM, one of Washington's well-known women lawyers, and also president of the woman's auxiliary of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club and a member of the board of the Self-Help Exchange, leaves today to spend three weeks in Kentucky. She will go to her home in Morgantown to vote and from there to Cumberland Falls for a short rest.

• • • •

MRS. WILLIS J. NOLAN, of Chevy Chase—the wood-carver of Chevy Chase Woman's Club—with Mr. Nolan, their daughter, Donia, and son, Willis, jr., leave today for a motor trip to Ohio. They will spend a week with relatives at Madison, on Lake Erie.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. HENRY A. COX and their daughter, Eleanor, left yesterday for a motor trip of two weeks through Pennsylvania, New York and into New England. Mrs. Cox, probably better known as Elizabeth M. than as Mrs. Henry A. is vice president of the Zonta Club. Both she and her husband are attorneys and their daughter is a gifted young artist who recently had an exhibition here.

Combining business with pleasure, Mr. and Mrs. Cox will attend to some legal matters in Pennsylvania and Miss Cox will visit art studios and exhibitions in New York and Provincetown.

WHILE we're talking about Zonta and Zontians, we might add one or two others to the list of vacationists—Emily Dickinson, who is spending her vacation at Ogunquit, Me.; Ethel Hess, who is preparing to go to Moorehead City, N. C., and Marion Hines Taylor, who, with Mr. Taylor and her mother, Mrs. L. J. Hines, has just been to Nags Head, N. C.

• • • •

The Zonta program for the month, announced in the August "Zontagram," includes a talk at tomorrow's luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. by Adelaide Courtney, a club member; a talk next Wednesday by Mercedes Jordan, a permanent work scholarship girl who is taking a reference librarian course, and an address August 17 by Mrs. Lucille McMurray, a member of the local Altrusa Club. August 24 a members meeting will be held without a planned program and, on August 31, the monthly closed meeting.

Striped Chipmunk's Decision

Times there are we must decide
If we'll stay or run or hide.
—Striped Chipmunk.

Striped Chipmunk was uneasy. He had lived a long time in the old stonewall on the edge of the Old Orchard. He was beginning to suspect that he had lived there long enough. Too many people knew where he lived. Every day Black Pussy spent a lot of time lying in wait for him somewhere along the old wall. Every day one or another of the Hawk family looked the old wall over and he knew that he was one of those being looked for. It wasn't safe to fail to be on watch for even a minute. And now he had heard a rumor that was most disturbing. The rumor was that Shadow the Weasel had been seen in the neighborhood.

Now Black Pussy and the Hawks were bad enough, but they were nothing to worry about, compared with Shadow the Weasel. From those others he had only to dive down between the stones of the old wall to be safe. All that was necessary was to keep sharp watch to avoid being surprised. But Shadow the Weasel was someone else altogether. Little cold chills started at his toenails and ran all over Striped Chipmunk every time he thought of Shadow the Weasel. There would be no escape from him just by diving down between the stones. No, sir, there would be no escape that way. Whereever he could go Shadow could follow. There was no escape from him, except by outwitting him, and one could not be at all sure of outwitting him.

"If it is true that Shadow is in the neighborhood, and Sammy Jay says that he saw Shadow only a day or two ago, he is bound to visit this wall sooner or later. He knows that I live here. He knows that I have lived here for a long time. I fooled him once when he followed me into my house by closing a door behind me and he probably hasn't forgotten it. It might not work a second time. I suppose the wise thing for a Chipmunk in my situation is to move. But where?" Striped Chipmunk stared off into space from the big stone in the old wall which was a favorite place of his.

It was after this that Striped Chipmunk did a lot of running about. Friends of his caught glimpses of him in the most unexpected places. If he could find a suitable place perhaps he would make a new home. He hadn't fully decided to move, but if he should be forced to it would be well to know just where to go. It was on one of these exploring trips that he met Peter Rabbit. Peter expressed his surprise at seeing Striped Chipmunk so far from the old stone wall.

"I'm not so far from it as you are from the dear Old Briar-patch," asserted Striped Chipmunk.

Peter had to admit this. "Why not?" he demanded. "I am much bigger than you and I have long legs, while yours are short. Besides, I never was such a homebody as you."

"It is because I am such a homebody that I am running around now," replied Striped Chipmunk, and chuckled softly at the blank expression on Peter's face. "Home," he continued, "should be the safest place in the world, a place of peace and no worry."

"Isn't yours?" Peter wanted to know.

"It used to be," replied Striped Chipmunk, "but now too many know about it. I never know who may be hanging around when I come out."

Peter looked at him with sudden suspicion. "Striped Chipmunk, are you planning to move?" he demanded.

"I haven't said a word about moving," retorted Striped Chipmunk, and scurried away straight for the old stonewall and home. "I'll do it," he declared, "and the sooner I do it the better."

Having reached a decision he felt better. It would be strange indeed not to be living under and in the old wall but it would be worse not to be living at all, and he had a steadily growing feeling that this is what would surely happen if he remained. So he would move, and he had decided just where he would move to. It was a momentous decision.

D. A. V. Auxiliary Plans Convention

Interest of the women's auxiliary, Disabled American Veterans of the World War, is now centered on the national convention which takes place August 13-20 at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Before going to the convention the women will attend a moonlight cruise on board the S. S. Potomac Saturday night. Another cruise is scheduled for August 27.

Those planning to go to Grand Rapids are Mrs. Roy Westbury, Mrs. Suzanne Miller, Mrs. Lucille Cuney, Mrs. Lucille Lindstrom, Mrs. Lucy Babcock and Mrs. Penn Howard.

At Grand Rapids the auxiliary will elect a national commander and other national officers. Women, of course, will be taboo at the rendezvous of the French Hats, fun organization of the D. A. V., but the same evening will have a "French rat widows' " consolation party.

Mrs. Mary Holt, commander, was present at the recent presentation by Department Commander John T. Chedester to Miss Patricia Gormley, jr., of a scholarship to Columbus University Junior College.

Miaja Troops Take KeyBluff, Menace Teruel

Loyalists Catch Franco Off Guard, as He Concentrates on Gandesa.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France (at the Spanish Frontier), Aug. 1.—Gen. Jose Miaja's loyalist army captured the "Bluff of Camarena," 13 miles south of Tereul, by storm today. Gen. Franco hurried troops from other fronts to defend his Teruel lines.

Miaja's attack caught the insurgents off guard at the moment they were using every available man to protect Gandesa, 100 miles northeast of Teruel, against government offensives from Catalonia.

Teruel 10 Miles Away.

[However, Insurgents reported that the international brigades including Americans, Frenchmen and British volunteers, were unable to continue the assault on Gandesa because they lack ammunition, the United Press said. Insurgent dispatches described the capture of 350 prisoners of the international brigades, including many Americans.—Editor's note.]

The loyalist advance brought government guns within 10 miles of Teruel, capital of the Province of Teruel, which the government recaptured and lost again less than six months ago.

Camarena Vital Point.

The success of this surprise attack forced insurgent commanders in the Teruel area to demand reinforcements to protect the Teruel-Sagunto highway to the coast, and itself. Camarena, 6 miles southwest of the highway, is a vital point. It dominates a dozen towns.

There was intense activity behind both fronts in the last 48 hours. The government was transferring men and material across the Ebro into the newly conquered zone before Gandesa.

Gen. Franco was trying to defend both the Teruel and Ebro sectors, at the same time pushing his own counterattacks in the northern and southern Ebro zones.

Despite heavy attacks by the insurgents on both flanks, the government line about the Ebro region was changed little. The insurgents, with superior aviation and artillery, made some progress in daylight hours, but the government, relying on night attacks and day defense, succeeded in holding its lines.

Arab Policeman Killed, 6 Hurt in Holy Land Strife

Jerusalem, Aug. 1 (U.P.).—An Arab detective sergeant of the supernumerary police was shot dead at Jaffa Gate today and three bombs exploded at Haifa, injuring six Arabs, in a recurrence of racial violence between Jews and Arabs.

The death sentence of Mordecai Schwartz, Jewish supernumerary constable, was confirmed by Sir Harold MacMichael, British high commissioner. Schwartz was sentenced for murdering an Arab constable at the high commissioner's camp at Athlit. The privy council refused an appeal on July 21.

A Jewish supernumerary constable was wounded when an American-owned stone quarry south of Jerusalem was fired on by snipers.

'HotDog' Snobbish, Italians Ask a Ban

Rome, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Merchants Confederation today invited buyers, restaurants, coffee shops, beach resorts and similar establishments to drop such "exotic and foreign names" as "hot dogs" and "cocktails."

Accordingly, hot dogs, cocktails, sandwiches, hors d'ouvres and roast beef will receive Italian equivalents. The order, which was directed against "snobbery" among Italians, also discouraged names like Rome's "Hollywood Bar."

2 Japanese Cities Swept by Floods

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Floods struck two populous Japanese cities today. Five hundred homes were inundated and destroyed in Kyoto and two bridges and many roads were destroyed.

Water again was rushing into the business center of Kobe. The railroad between Kobe and Osaka was flooded and traffic was suspended. No casualties were reported.

Sudetens Condemn Czech Minority Bill

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 1 (AP).—The Sudeten German party in a pamphlet today condemned the Czechoslovak Government's proposals for settling minorities questions as "utterly inadequate."

The party, which represents a majority of the Germanic minority of 3,500,000, largest in Czechoslovakia, said its criticisms were leveled at the government's proposals as far as they have been officially announced.

$35,000 Bond Set For 3 Suspects in Car-Stealing Ring

Three men, accused of stealing automobiles in the District and transporting them to Richmond, Va., were held to the grand jury yesterday under bonds totaling $35,000.

Police Court Judge McMahon set bond at $15,000 in a grand larceny case against Floyd Talley, 34, of Richmond. Palmer G. Wellhouse and John Kendig, both of Richmond, were held by Commissioner Turnage under $10,000 each. They posted the bail in cash.

Wellhouse and Kendig are accused of operating a garage in Richmond to which 19 stolen automobiles were traced.

Japan Fears Air Raid.

Tokyo (Tuesday) Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Japan and Russia today were nearer to war than at any time since their great struggle which ended in 1905 and established the Japanese empire as a first class power.

In Tokyo the full cabinet was to meet during the day to decide issues on which the fate of the empire may hinge. Premier Prince Konoye was in constant touch with his colleagues and with Emperor Hirohito, who remained beside a telephone in his villa at the seashore resort of Hayama, near the great naval base in Yokosuka.

In southwestern Japan, nearest the fortified Russian air base in Vladivostok, the country was darkened and full air-raid precautions were in force.

In Hsinking, capital of Manchukuo, headquarters of the Japanese Kwantung army—which is joined with the Korean army in facing the Soviet legions—announced all border points were manned and Japanese forces were ready for any eventuality.

Nazi People's Car To Cost Only $380

Lerkusen, Germany, Aug. 1 (AP).—Germany's new "people's car," the Volkswagen, is to cost 950 marks (about $380), can be bought on the installment plan at the rate of five marks ($2) a week, will travel at a speed of 62½ m. p. h., and will give about 40 miles to the gallon of gasoline. Details of the popular, low-priced automobile were disclosed by Dr. Robert Ley, leader of the German labor front, in an address to 15,000 workers.

Hunt for Clipper Enters Fourth Day

Manila, Tuesday, Aug. 2 (AP).—Determined forces of the United States Army and Navy started at dawn today to scan new areas of ocean in their fourth day of search for the Hawaii Clipper, which disappeared five days ago with 15 persons aboard.

Undiscouraged by the long search over a vast sea area, which has yielded only an ominous patch of oil on the Pacific some 500 miles east of Manila, they still hope to find some trace of the great seaplane's six passengers and nine crewmen—or bits of wreckage to explain their fate.

France Creates A New Army on Reich Border

War Zone, Fighting Corps Set Up as Nazis Build Fortifications.

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 1.—The government today created a new military region and army corps on the French northeast frontier adjoining Germany, coincident with information that 200,000 workers are rushing work on fortifications in the German Rhineland.

The decree did not mention Germany's fortifications, but diplomats saw a close connection with the German decree closing to foreign visits a 35-mile wide strip of German territory running the entire length of the French and Belgian borders.

Today's French decree actually establishes a new border army corps, inasmuch as each military region has a self-contained corps under the French defense system.

The ministry of national defense, headed by Premier Daladier, said work is progressing rapidly on French border defenses on the northeast Belgian sector from Maubeuge to the English channel.

This fortification was started after completion of the main portion of the Maginot line, from Maubeuge to Belfort and followed close on Belgian's announcement that she was reverting to her prewar neutrality status.

6,000 of 'Self-Defense Corps' Given Weapons; Foreigners Fear Undisciplined Hordes Will Loot City; Japanese Advance Slowly.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), Aug. 2.—Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek today began arming peasants and workers in the Hankow area for a last-ditch defense of his provisional capital against the encircling armies of Japan.

First to receive arms were 6,000 workmen of the newly organized "self-defense corps," but it was understood an additional 60,000 longshoremen and ricksha pullers will be given weapons when the Japanese launch their final drive on the three cities which constitute the military heart of China.

Foreigners feared Communists who long had urged this step are creating an armed rabble of untrained and undisciplined men who will loot the city before the Japanese enter.

Gen. Chen Cheng, in command of the Hankow area, was confident, however, that discipline would be maintained and that the defense of the provisional capital would be successful.

He said that an additional 200,000 workers would be mobilized later.

The Japanese fought slowly forward on the front south of Kiukiang, to the southwest of Hankow, and laughed at Chinese reports of a counter-offensive "in which 2,000 Japanese soldiers were killed."

The Chinese war office spokesman in Hankow said "the Japanese advance has been halted on all fronts by our counter-offensive."

In Shanghai the Japanese army spokesman said that "our advance is continuing satisfactorily."

Police Fight Hawaii Strikers; 36 Hurt

Hilo, Hawaii, Aug. 1 (AP).—Two women and seven men were wounded seriously and an eighth man was bayonetted today, while 26 others suffered minor wounds when police fired into 500 strikers or sympathizers gathered to protest the docking of the steamer Waialeale from Honolulu.

The riot was the second at Hilo within ten days in connection with the Waialeale, which the Inter-Island Navigation Company was operating despite a two-month strike, in which four steamers were tied up after negotiations failed on longshoremen's demands.

After the volley was fired, the strikers retired to a parking area, where they voted not to fight but to insist on the right to picket the ship.

Miss Bailly's "ELECTRIC RANGE is a huge Success"

Miss Bailly says:

"I wouldn't part with my Electric Range for anything. I like it better every time I use it, and have had no trouble at all in cooking. The food has a different taste, there is no shrinkage of meats, and altogether my Electric Range is a huge success."

(Signed) MISS FLORENCE M. BAILLY
4341 Nebraska Ave., N. W.

Miss Bailly's entire Electric Bill was only $3.18 last month

LET'S look at the figures. Shown is the actual bill rendered to Miss Bailly last month. Just one of more than 15,000 bills sent to Electric Range users in and around Washington every month.

For $3.18 Miss Bailly did all her cooking, cleaning, lighting, operated her electric refrigerator, attic ventilating fan, radio and many small appliances.

Electrical dealers and department stores are now offering a $15.00 allowance for your old stove on the purchase of a modern Electric Range.

MISS BAILLY USES ALL THESE APPLIANCES IN HER HOME:

RANGE	OIL BURNER	REFRIGERATOR	SEWING MACHINE
PERCOLATOR	RADIO	ELECTRIC IRON	VACUUM CLEANER
2 GRILLS	SUN LAMP	3 CLOCKS	ATTIC COOLING SYSTEM
TOASTER	MIXER	2 WAFFLE IRONS	ELECTRIC DOOR CHIMES

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

When Jimmy Roosevelt's retort to the article about his insurance earnings appears in Collier's late this month, fortified, perhaps, by pictures of his income tax returns, it will show his last year's income around $42,000, besides his White House wages. This will make Alva Johnston's estimates of $250,000 to $2,000,000 a year seem rather fantastic.

Felix Frankfurter . . . lawyers' No. 1

But 1937 wasn't one of Jimmy's best years. That was the year he left the risk vineyards and gave his talents to his country at a beggarly $10,000 a year.

From then on, no new business; presumably only his commission on the renewal premiums kept trickling in.

WELTPOLITIK: Maybe Prime Minister Chamberlain was looking at Anglo-American relations through rose-colored glasses when he said "they have never been better" . . .

Recently at least two American Cabinet members have spoken scornfully and scathingly of England and England's policies, in private.

"—the hazing of Steve Early"

Also, several potent new dealers of the inner circle are Anglophobes (England-haters) of the first water, and distrust Chamberlain's game of footie with Hitler . . . What's more, it's just an illusion that President Roosevelt likes English fascist economic royalists any more than he likes the American brand.

Distance may lend a little enchantment—but . . .

* * * *

The hazing of Secretary Stephen Early by Neptune's myrmidons at the equator, which caused him some mental anguish in advance, must have petered out. No emergency planes have rushed surgeons to the President's cruiser; hospital ships have not raced to the Galapagos . . . or the former captain of A. E. F. Infantry can take it better than he imagined.

* * * *

POTOMAC MEDLEY: Amid the razzle-dazzle and hullaballoo of politics, music doth soothe the savage new deal breast . . .

The 16,000 minions of Government who gather at the Potomac watergate and listen to melody from the showboat barge anchored offshore, with the red and green lights of planes swooping overhead, and the low dark Virginia hills across the river, the Lincoln Memorial behind and the Lee Mansion a pale ghost in Arlington, attest how bloodless is the revolution; and not very revolutionary at that.

"—diplomats at a barbecue"

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: Toward dusk these August evenings, with blood on the moon in Europe, some of the younger diplomats in Washington like to go for a gallop through Rock Creek Park or along the river, a merry melange from half a dozen lands (fascists and anti-fascists) all in one cavalcade . . .

Afterwards, do they go to some swanky club or restaurant to dine in state? No; they prefer to storm a barbecue over at the airport, and maybe take a dip in the pool with the proletariat.

Even the authoritarians like the free and easy atmosphere of American democracy.

* * * *

Among the gentlefolk there are dark whispers that Roosevelt would like to appoint Frankfurter, Corcoran or Jerome Frank to the Supreme Court, or maybe all three . . . They whisper it with an ironic sigh, rolling their eyes upward . . .

They forget that a year ago the American Bar voted Prof. Frankfurter their No. 1 nominee for the Supreme Court, above John W. Davis and Newton Baker—Senator Wagner ran fourth . . .

* * * *

CAPITAL CAVIAR: Occasionally some worldly Washingtonian takes a visiting country cousin to a little tea room on Seventeenth street, not far from the White House, to see the fierce young new dealers, who like to eat stuffed tomatoes in the garden . . . "I declare," said one lady from Missouri, "they look nice and gentle, just like the boy next door!" . . . A union baker in Washington has just been fined $100 for buying an automobile whose manufacturer is on the "unfair list." . . . Eleanor Roosevelt once complained that she didn't like the aroma of a campaign train after the second day.

Palatial Coach Brings $750 In Circus Sale

McCoy's Private Car Among Bargains at Auction Here.

The golden voice of Lawrence Phillips that once thrilled baseball fandom when it called the batteries to play in Griffith Stadium, yesterday sang out "$750 is my bid" and gained tentative possession of Col. Tim McCoy's palatial $15,000 railroad car with three shower baths, refrigerator, dining room, two staterooms and a living room.

The sale of McCoy's show "home," a quick business deal in the sale of the defunct McCoy holdings, was spared to the eyes of its former owner. No one on the auction grounds knew where the show-luckless colonel was. But 15-year-old Howard Baker, of Billings, Mont., who came to Washington with McCoy and couldn't understand why the show suddenly stopped, was there, wandering among the stacked up saddles and harness and lifting, occasionally, his 10-gallon hat to mop the perspiration.

12 Flat Cars Sold.

The sale opened at 10 a. m. at the Baltimore & Ohio Freight Depot, where Auctioneer Robert Weschler cried the moving stock. He let 12 flat cars go to a representative of the Warren Tank Car Co., for $925 each. Frank Fellows, an old showman and representative of the Springfield, Mo., Wagon & Trailer Co., bought largely. Under his bid fell a tank wagon, holding 1,560 gallons ($550), 40 brightly-colored wagons ($27,000) and a string of flat cars. He called $2,000 successfully, for a wagon that drives tent poles quicker than a circus fan can eat a hamburger.

A wandering carnival man stepped up with $1,200 and bought the McCoy business office, a gypsy wagon with a cashier's cage. Four large electric generators brought $750. Auction officials said the stuff was going cheaply, and there were rumors that the receivers, Sybil U. Ward, Edmund M. Toland and William B. Collins, were discontented. The sales are only tentative; approval of each item must be given by District Court.

Day's Best Bargain.

The day's sweetest bargain was obtained by Phillips, now part owner of the Johnny Jones Shows. The fixtures in Col. McCoy's car cost $3,000, it was said. It is a standard steel Pullman car called "Cheyenne," with two staterooms, one bedroom, a living room, dining room, kitchen, three showers and a refrigerator. It was from these commodious surroundings that McCoy hoped long to direct a brand new wild West show, the show that made a last staggering appearance in Washington before creditors closed the tent flaps.

From the depot the sale moved to Fidelity Storage Co. at 1420 U street northwest. There on two vast floors was enough equipment to sustain any group of pioneers going into an abject wilderness. There was the blacksmith's forge and equipment; enough uniforms with gold braid for an army; big boxes full of rifles; McClelland, English, Cavalry and Indian saddles; steam boilers; an electric light plant; a public address system; blankets, ropes, chains and iron stakes; lanterns; kitchen and dining room equipment; 1,077 sheets and 866 pillowcases; concession equipment; plank seats with Bible backs to accommodate 9,000; butchers' knives and white duck pants; toy balloons and ducks that walk like men; a ballyhoo platform; Conestoga prairie schooners, and a brand new Concord stage coach.

It was said that a man came all the way here from Cheyenne, Wyo., to buy the stage coach, but the records showed its sale to Morgan Chaney, of the CY Ranch, San Angelo, Tex. The sale will probably last two more days.

Mrs. Lansburgh, Charities Leader, Dies in Baltimore

Mrs. Hannah M. Lansburgh, widow of James Lansburgh, one of the founders of Lansburgh & Bros. department store, died yesterday in Johns Hopkins Hospital at Baltimore.

Mrs. Lansburgh had been ill about a month. Her husband died in 1917.

Prominent in philanthropic work, Mrs. Lansburgh was a member of the Washington section of the National Council of Jewish Women and of the board of directors of the Jewish Community Center. She made her home here at the Shoreham Hotel.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Beatrice L. Weinberg, of Baltimore; Mrs. Myer Cohn, of Cleveland, and Mrs. Samuel P. Schwartz, and a son, Mark Lansburgh, both of Washington. She also leaves three sisters and nine grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held in Washington, but the time had not been set last night.

All Well on 3d St.; Two Firemen Part 1 Cat and 1 Can

An unidentified cat, described as probably without a permanent address, was rescued last night by Fire Rescue Squad No. 1 from the effects of its own appetite.

Called to 1010 Third street southwest, the squad found the cat, its head in a salmon can, charging blindly all over the place and filling the air with shrill epithets. Donning rubber gloves, two husky members of the squad, who modestly asked that their names be withheld, approached the frantic cat.

One caught the cat; the other caught the can. Both pulled.

Cat and can came apart and the cat was last seen and longer heard taking it on the lam across lots to parts yet unknown.

Parents Held To Blame for Traffic's Toll

WPA Workers to Help in Opening of 13 Playgrounds.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday held Washington parents "largely responsible" for the highest July traffic death record in 15 years.

With 13 persons—5 of them children—killed on District streets last month, police records revealed one of the worst traffic periods since July, 1923.

Hazen warned motorists to be on the alert for youngsters, at the same time blaming negligent parents for permitting their children to play along heavily traveled streets.

"The wholesale slaughter of children last month was shocking," Hazen said. "We are doing our best to cut Washington's traffic toll and I feel a share of the burden rests with parents—they are largely responsible for child deaths."

Playgrounds to Open.

He urged parents to take advantage of plans completed yesterday to open 13 playgrounds and aid District traffic authorities by keeping children off the streets. Hazen asked also that mothers and fathers "talk traffic" to their children and warn them against highway dangers.

Eighteen of the 52 WPA workers who have been assigned to the District's playground system will be available today for the opening of whatever playgrounds school officials wish, Mrs. Mary Steele, director of the WPA woman's and profession projects, said yesterday. The remainder will be available before the end of the week.

Detailed plans for the operation of the 13 additional school playgrounds were completed at a conference in the office of Ross Haworth, acting deputy WPA administrator for the District.

Will Provide Equipment.

Thirteen of the 52 WPA workers, Haworth said, will be senior recreational directors, one for each playground, and three assistant and junior recreational workers will complete the staff at each playground.

Besides furnishing directors, the WPA will furnish recreational equipment, Haworth said. The project will cost the WPA $5,614.

The program will be directed by Lewis R. Barrett, co-ordinator of recreational facilities for the District.

Of the five youngsters killed last month, the oldest was 12 and the youngest 2. Deaths during July brought the year's total to 53 as against 62 for the same period in 1937.

Although fatalities increased over July of last year, the number of personal injuries and accidents showed a marked drop. A total of 283 persons were injured as compared to 402 in 1937. Accidents dropped from 1,067 in July last year to 799 last month.

Fourteen persons were killed in July, 1923, when the District's all-time high fatality record was established. The toll of 13 last month was 6 higher than July of last year.

Renewed efforts will be made, Hazen said, to curb accident deaths and injuries during the balance of the year. He indicated plans are afoot to inaugurate an intensive educational program, but withheld further comment.

Meanwhile, a man identified as Clarence S. Herring, 79, who died yesterday in Baltimore, was believed to be the District's fifty-fourth traffic victim. Herring was injured here in a mishap on May 18.

Baltimore physicians attributed his death to heart failure induced by shock suffered in the crash. He was a passenger in an automobile which collided with another car at Third and O streets northwest.

2 Brothers Stab, Beat Each Other, Drive to Hospital

They're tough, those Jones boys.

Last night Ben Jones, 26, and Willie Jones, 30, colored brothers, of 1203 South Capitol street, had an argument at the corner of South Capitol and N streets southeast. When it ended, Ben had eight icepick wounds in the back and Willie nursed a possible skull fracture, a broken nose and a lacerated left eye, all inflicted with an automobile crank handle.

Then both Ben and Willie got in their automobiles and drove themselves to Gallinger Hospital, where they are being treated.

The youths, the third contingent of second classmen to visit the Capital this summer, also will visit Langley, Va., New York, New London and Newport.

PostCampFund Short but $288 For21Children

Last of 100 Promised Trip Tense as Collection Hits $1,111.

Life is becoming pretty tense for 21 Washington boys and girls. They are all that are left of the 100 to whom The Post has promised a vacation at camp. As the days roll on, they become more and more worried lest the summer end and school start again before they get their chance at camp.

The cost is small considering the magnitude of these children's need and the good which two weeks at camp will do them. Only $288 is necessary to pay the expenses of all 21.

A gift of $14 means two weeks at camp for one child.

Fifth Marines' Advance Detail Precedes 800 to Camp Ritchie

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Camp Ritchie, Md., Aug. 1.—The Marines have landed, but the National Guard still has the situation well in hand.

An advanced detail of 23 Marines commanded by Capt. J. Carter, arrived in camp by truck late this afternoon to prepare for 800 Marines of the Fifth Battalion, fleet reserves, due here Sunday.

The Marine reserve units, from the District and vicinity, are camping in the Maryland camp for the first time in several years. Renovation of their Quantico barracks this summer is the reason for the change in their camp site.

Lieut. Edward D. Mulvanity, battalion adjutant of the 104th Quartermaster Regiment, commanded a convoy of eight trucks and an ambulance from Camp Simms, D. C., to Camp Ritchie.

Leaving Washington, the convoy encountered heavy rains, which halted it several times. Coats and raincoats had to be donned and removed frequently as alternate spells of heat and cold met the troops.

The 372d Infantry this morning went through battle maneuvers in extended order. First aid lectures were conducted by Corpl. Eugene Howley.

Virginia Beach, Va., Aug. 1.—Under a hot sun, pith-helmeted troops of the 260th Coast Artillery (anti-aircraft) toiled today to complete emplacements for their big rifles and the machine guns which they will train on towed targets tomorrow.

Thirty miles of telephone wire have been strung through the camp and among the gun emplacements. Three radio transmitters were put in operation today to maintain contact between ground and air.

On the way to camp yesterday the regiment was entertained aboard their boat by a variety of talent recruited from its ranks and staged under supervision of James Van Horn. Among the stars were Kenneth Burgess, barytone; Howard Mason, imitations; Robert McMara and Robert Reynolds, boxing; Edward Lyman, guitar. Music was furnished by the regimental band and orchestra.

Arriving in camp at 7:30 a. m. the regiment was settled by noon. Church services for Catholics were held at 9 a. m. and general services at 11 a. m. Their afternoon free, the troops took free buses to Virginia Beach.

Tonight officers of the regiment entertained at Fort Monroe officers of the Air Corps, who will tow the sleeve targets at which the anti-aircraft will fire in coming practices.

Pleased with the efficient test mobilization of the 121st Engineers, District National Guard, at Camp Simms, Anacostia, Sunday, Col. John W. Oehmann and other regimental officers prepared yesterday to plunge into two weeks of intensive training.

Of 475 enlisted men mobilized, only four were found to be physically unfit for immediate service, Col. Oehmann said, "and these impediments might be overcome with treatment," he added.

During their training period, troops at Camp Simms will undergo further physical examinations and will make property counts of units which arrived late yesterday and will arrive today.

"This is a far cry from the World War days of 1917," Col. Oehmann said, "when it took us eight days to mobilize at Fort Myer. We could have completed this mobilization in three days instead of four with the perfected system now worked out."

Robber Assaults Woman With Brick

Police last night were searching for a colored youth who assaulted a young woman with a brick when he entered her home, apparently to rob it. Gladys E. Naylor, 26, of 2000 F street northwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for lacerations and bruises on her head and neck. The woman told police the youth entered her apartment through a rear window. When she discovered him, he struck her with the brick and fled.

Sales Machine Owner Reports Theft of $782

Theft of $782, of which $400 was in nickels and dimes, was reported to police yesterday by Ralph Feinberg, manager of a vending machine establishment at 725 Second street northwest. The balance of the loss, Feinberg said, was represented by cigars and cigarettes. He said the establishment was entered early yesterday, apparently with a duplicate key.

Paving Is Started on Parkway Between Bridge, Lee Highway

(Photograph on Page 8.)

Work was started yesterday on paving the George Washington Memorial Parkway extension between Key Bridge and Lee highway, Arno B. Cammerer, director of the National Park Service, announced. He said low bidder on the work was the Corson & Gruman Co., of Washington, at $89,688.05.

The work, supervised by the Bureau of Public Roads, must be completed by March 1. At the same time, Cammerer said paving on the Parkway extension between Lee boulevard and Arlington Memorial Bridge will be opened to the public about October 1.

The Key Bridge-Lee highway section of the parkway will include two 24-foot concrete roadways separated by traffic islands 10 to 30 feet wide.

The Bureau of Public Roads notified Interior Secretary Ickes it has completed its study in connection with constructing an additional arch at the Virginia end of Key Bridge and that work would be begun this year. Meanwhile, it was announced, the roads bureau and the branch of plans and design, National Park Service, are studying jointly a heavy duty road to handle truck traffic between the Key Bridge at Rosslyn, Va., and U. S. highway No. 1 at the south end of the Highway Bridge.

Miss Elg Wins 4-Year Fight For Citizenship

Girl Born in U. S. of Swedish Parents Ruled American.

Ending a fight begun four years ago when the Bureau of Immigration held she was a Swedish citizen, Miss Marie Elizabeth Elg, born in the United States in 1907 of Swedish parents, yesterday was declared an American citizen by the United States Court of Appeals.

While a child—in 1911—Miss Elg was taken to Sweden by her parents. Her father had been naturalized here before she was born. In 1921 she came to this country with an American passport, but when it was learned her father remained in the old country, had no intention of returning here and, furthermore, had indicated a willingness to give up his American papers, she was held to be in this country illegally.

Mrs. Barrier Wins Old Photo Contest

First prize for the most interesting entry in the "Old Photograph Contest" sponsored by S. Kann Sons Co., Washington department store, was awarded to Mrs. F. T. Barrier, of 1525 T street northwest, it was announced yesterday. The daguerreotype that are submitted was taken about 1850.

The second and third prizes went to Mrs. Kirby Taylor, of McLean, Va., for a photograph of her grandmother, a relative of Louisa M. Alcott, the novelist, and to Mrs. E. W. Boyd, of Lovington, Ill.

The three prize pictures will be entered in the National Old Photograph Contest. Judges of the elimination held by the Kann Co. were Arthur Ellis, Washington Post photographer, Miss Jackie Martin, photographic editor of the Washington Herald, and R. P. Tolman, acting director of the Fine Arts Collection at the National Museum.

25 Florists Affiliate With Merchants Body

Twenty-five Washington florists, members of the old Florists Club, last night became affiliated with the Merchants and Manufacturers Association as the Retail Florist Division. G. A. Roberts, of the Dupont Circle Flower Shop, was named division chairman.

A committee was appointed to outline a program of development for the new organization.

5 Police Units In Treasury May Merge

Consolidation Will Be Attempted at Next Congress.

Elmer L. Irey Expected to Be Chief of New Agency.

A merger of five law-enforcement agencies in the Treasury Department will be sought in the next Congress, it was learned yesterday.

The consolidation is intended to cut expenses and will be in line with the Administration's program of reorganization.

The five agencies involved, which it is proposed to make a separate bureau, are the Secret Service, the Narcotics Bureau, the Customs Service, the Intelligence Unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau and the Alcohol Tax Unit.

While a similar bill was introduced into the last Congress, it was withdrawn at President Roosevelt's request. He asked that it wait until the reorganization measure was disposed of.

Administration spokesmen said, however, that should the reorganization bill be reintroduced and again blocked, they would press the Treasury bill as a separate matter.

Named as head of the new agency, according to "complete plans" that are now "already on paper," is Elmer L. Irey, veteran Treasury agent. He is said to have been laying the groundwork for the consolidation.

Plans for the consolidation, it was said, are part of a broad program for co-operation among Treasury enforcement agencies, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Postal Inspection Service.

While the Coast Guard would not be involved directly in the merger, it would be represented in the bureau in a "collaboration" capacity.

Labor Candidate For D.C. Executive Chosen Delegate

John Locher, Labor's candidate for Commissioner of the District, last night was unanimously nominated to be the delegate of the Central Labor Union at the October convention of the American Federation of Labor.

The organization, which met in the Typographical Temple, also went on record in opposition to the use of paper containers for milk. The resolution, presented by the Milk Drivers Union, protested the "delivery of milk in paper containers as detrimental to the health of our people."

Frank J. Coleman, secretary of the Central Union, in seconding the motion nominating Locher as delegate to the convention said, "It would be nice if the Washington delegate to the American Federation of Labor convention could be introduced as Commissioner of the District of Columbia."

The delegate to the convention will be formally elected at the next meeting of the Central Labori Unon, it was explained.

Mrs.L.D. Lockwood WillsSister$154,000

An estate valued at $154,000 was left by the late Mrs. Louise Doble Lockwood, widow of George Roe Lockwood, a petition for probate of her will filed in District Court disclosed yesterday. After minor bequests, the estate was willed to her sister, Florence Maud Doble.

Individual bequests included $10,000 to Richard B. Lockwood, jr., a nephew; $1,500 to a former chauffeur, and $500 to a maid. Executors are the Washington Loan & Trust Co., and Frederick M. Bradley, a director of the bank.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Audiences Afforded a "Thrill" By "Surprise" Vaudeville Acts

Unexpected Stellar Appearances Add Fillip to Theatergoing; Warners Hold Conclave; Beauty Judging Tonight; From a Hollywood Workshop.

ONE of the most agreeable fillips of persistent theatergoing is the occasional gratuitous "surprise" appearance on the stage of some unprogrammed and unexpected star. It doesn't happen very often, but still it does happen.

BELL.

Take last week at the Earle, for instance. At the last two performances of the stage bill last Saturday, those in attendance, primarily to see and hear ZaSu Pitts, the week's visiting Hollywood star, got double their money's worth when Miss Pitts, out of a clear sky, so to speak, introduced Tommy Riggs and his "Betty Lou" as an added starter.

Mr. Riggs, who played an engagement on his own at the Earle last spring, was just passing through on his way East, it seems, and dropped off in Washington to pay a call on Miss Pitts, with whom he recently shared billing in a Chicago theater. His unexpected stint on the stage done, Mr. Riggs proceeded on to New York, where he and Betty Lou long have been fixtures on the Rudy Vallee programs.

His departure, however, did not end a reasonable audience expectation of similar surprise entertainment at the Earle during the week beginning Friday. Next week's star of the stage portion of the program, in person, will be Frances Langford, popular singer of stage, screen and radio. Miss Langford was married not so long ago and her present vaudeville tour is in the nature of a transcontinental honeymoon trip, since her husband is accompanying her, although he has no part in her act. Her husband is Jon Hall, the young man who made so favorable an impression in the stellar male role in Samuel Goldwyn's production of "The Hurricane," with Dorothy Lamour.

When Miss Langford played the Paramount Theater, in New York, a few weeks ago, on several occasions she beckoned a handsome young fellow out from the wings and introduced him to the audience. The handsome young man, of course, was Mr. Hall.

Sinclair Lewis to the contrary notwithstanding, "it can happen here." This is no promise, understand, based on any sort of managerial assurance or obligation—merely a purely personal supposition that history may repeat itself. Which, needless to say, it may not.

* * * *

When Jon Hall was selected for the role of Terangi in "The Hurricane," he was not so well known by that name as he is now. He was not, however, totally unknown to Hollywood and its casting executives. He had been around for quite a spell, colloquially speaking, under the name of Charles Locker. Up to the time of his choice for Terangi, Jon Hall was no better name than Charles Locker. It is now. Which probably is proof positive of something or other—I wouldn't know precisely what.

Speaking of the Warner organization, as we were by indirection, today is the day when Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in the Washington territory, holds the annual conclave with all of the house managers under his jurisdiction for the purpose of discussing next year's screen product and other pertinent matters. The meeting will be held in the Mayflower Hotel and will be attended by all nearby Warner managers in and out of Washington. Following today's conference, the delegates tomorrow will enjoy an all-day outing at Annapolis, Md.

Today's session will be addressed by Mr. Payette, Robert Smeltzer, district manager of Warner Brothers Pictures; Frank LaFalce, director of publicity; George A. Crouch, assistant zone manager; Guy Wonders, Maryland district manager; Nat Glasser, Virginia district manager; A. Julian Brylawski, in charge of real estate; C. E. McGowan, contact manager; Louis Ribitzski, booker, and J. Alton Pratt and Walter Pettus, in charge of projection and sound, respectively.

Managers who will attend the meeting are Fred Thomas, Charles Grimes, Robert Etris, Arthur Kilburg, Lamar Keen, Henry Coon, Alan Bachrach, Maynard Madden, Claude Land, Sidney Hoffman, Dan Reynolds, Fred McMillan, Lawrence Snoots, James Root, Walter Cersley, Theodore Lohmeyer, Rodney Collier, Waldo Chandler, Jack Forney, Joseph Cumiskey, George Payette, Lou Jusner, Henry Clark, C. H. McKinney, Frank Shaffer, Ralph Daves, Ted Crowther, George Bright and Thomas Baldridge. (Out-of-town papers please copy!)

Tonight, for the first time in the history of the contests, final judging of the candidates for the title of "Miss Washington" will take place aboard the Wilson Line steamer, City of Washington, leaving the Seventh Street Wharf at 8:30 o'clock. The winner of this competition in periphery, poise, pulchritude and what have you, will be the National Capital's entry in the Atlantic City Beauty Pageant and Variety Showmen's Jubilee, to be celebrated next month. The title of "Miss America," a shot at the movies and various other emoluments are the prizes of this seaside climax to the Nation-wide hunt for the "perfect" American girl.

There will be 18 contestants aboard ship tonight. To at least three of them, the goings-on will not be entirely novel, since that known number already have won local and sectional awards eminently qualifying them to compete for the "Miss Washington" honor.

The judges—and may the Lord have mercy on their souls—will be Emile Beauvais, famous beautician; Lyle O'Rourke, president of the Junior Board of Commerce, and the incumbents of the five drama desks of the local press. The Potomac River probably was chosen for this year's judging to make it easy for the 17 unsuccessful contestants to drop Al Stern's seven helpless pickers quietly overboard on the return trip!

From 410 S. Alvarado avenue, Los Angeles, Calif., under date of July 23, comes the following interesting letter from one of the Capital's more gifted singers, whistlers and resident actresses:

"Dear Mr. Bell: Greetings from the most interesting theater workshop in the world. Fifty of us were chosen for the summer session after going through two auditions before Dr. Max Reinhardt and a committee of seven. My arrival here could hardly have been timed more perfectly. Now life is just one continuous thrill.

My daily associates and contacts include such people as Paul Muni, Edward G. Robinson, Luise Rainer, Thornton Wilder, Margo, Mary Pickford, Ralph Bellamy, George Cukor and Constance Collier; my fellow students include the director of the National Theater in Athens, Greece, and others from Paris, Berlin, Budapest, Vienna and Moscow. It's just like a trip to Europe.

"There's not a phase of the theater that the Workshops curriculum doesn't cover: Acting, with Basil Rathbone, Constance Collier, Catherine Willard and Walter Huston; Ballet, with Adolph Bolm; Motion Picture Direction, with William Dieterle; Cinematography, with Tony Baudio; Radio Technique, with Charles Hamp, with N. B. C. for 15 years; Voice, with Mme. Koshetz, European opera star; Costume and Scenic Design, with Nicolai Remisoff. Fortunately for us, Dr. Reinhardt has made it possible for the really great artists of Europe and America to join hands for the development of American dramatic culture. We work night and day in classes, acting seminars and rehearsals—all under the personal supervision of Dr. Reinhardt and his executive assistant, Dr. Serge Bertensson, himself a former executive of the famous Moscow Art Theater.

"Those past write-ups you have given me in your column proved very helpful at my audition and I shall always be grateful. Even the program of the Roadside Theater went the rounds of the committee and brought forth much interest from them. If I should happen to get on the radio or be an assistant extra in a picture, I surely will let you know! Sincerely, (Signed.) JANET COON."

Despite the surplusage of ambitious young people who clutter up the Hollywood casting offices and studio gates, there seems still to exist the possibility of gaining a sort of toehold on the fringes of the sacred city by those who really have talent. And Miss Coon has it. I found that out as long ago as the old Crandall Saturday Nighters, when Janet occasionally filled the air with whistles, songs and "recitations" through Station WRC, 'way back yonder when the studio was out at Fourteenth street and Park road—where the transmitter, incidentally, still is.

The week of August 8, out at Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater, will bring Bert Lytell to the boards in Barre Lyndon's successful thriller, "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse." This is the play in which Edward G. Robinson will be seen on the screen, a little later on, with Claire Trevor in the principal feminine role.

Due to the S. R. O. patronage with which it has been favored this summer, the Cross Roads Theater management has reached a decision to sell reserved seats next season. Season subscriptions for next year will go on sale at the box office on August 15, which is by way of being two weeks from yesterday.

Both the Cross Roads and Roadside theaters, by the way, are continuing their bills through the current seven-day period—Noel Coward's "Private Lives" and "The Miner's Daughter," respectively. The Roadside tonight again will be open to the general public, having been bought out last night by the Young Republicans Club of Montgomery County, Md.

Among Europe's Contributions to American Films

SOON TO BE SEEN IN LOCAL THEATERS.

The Post's New Yorker

New York, Aug. 1.

SAMMY FAIN was born in New York 32 years ago, the youngest of three children. His family then settled in Monticello, where Harry—his brother—received a complete music education. Despite the urging of his parents Sammy refused to take any music lessons, and never has . . . "But it will help make something of you in this town," his father pleaded in vain . . . Fain has composed hits ranging from "Let a Smile Be Your Umbrella," "When I Take My Sugar to Tea" and "Was the Human Thing to Do?" to "By a Waterfall," "Every Day" and "You Brought a New Kind of Love to Me." He's one of Hollywood's most successful song writers and a Class A member of Ascap . . . Harry Fain, who studied music, "has made something of himself" in Monticello. He's still there—the town's most eminent violinist . . . unempolyed.

A NEW BOOK about Hollywood will be published shortly. Its authors are Chuck Reisner, M.-G.-M. director, who has been directing movies for the last 25 years . . . and Robert Hopkins, who has been writing for the screen for more than 20 years. The authors started to work on this book more than 15 years ago . . . The title of the book will be "My Four Years In Hollywood."

MAX REINHARDT is seeking Jimmy Savo to play in a Shakespearean play he's producing. Savo rehearsed his knowledge of Shakespearean forms of speech in preparation for his appointment at Reinhardt's office. Yesterday he discussed terms. "Thou," was Savo's proud exhibit of accomplishment, "thou must pay me more money!"

SAM LYONS, the theatrical agent was being razzed for the fact that his actor-clients couldn't make the Theater Guild's "Parade," a hit show. "Parade" was a Left-Wing review. "What do you expect?" Lyons commented. "Socialism has been a flop for 300 years. D'ya think the Theater Guild can put it over in five weeks?"

IT HAPPENED IN PARIS last summer. Billy Rose, making his first European trip. Was introduced to a Maharaja who allegedly was one of the world's wealthiest rulers. The Maharaja told of his racing stable which cost him $100,000 a year. On his turban was a rare gem beyond compare. He told also of his castles spread throughout every country in Europe . . . That evening the Maharaja told his entourage about his conversation with Rose and how understanding all Americans are. "But," the potentate frowned, "Mr. Rose kept using one word I couldn't understand—a term of endearment used by all Americans. He kept saying "Yes, Sambo; that's right, Sambo . . ."

A HOLLYWOOD STORY concerns Walter Catlett, who went West, bearing with him the critics' raves for his bits in "Sally" and other hits. A know-nothing supervisor interviewed him and asked: "Who are you?" "Sh . . . ," said Catlett, "don't tell anyone—but I'm Richard Mansfield." "What shows have you appeared in?" the unfazed executive continued. "Well," Catlett enumerated, "in 'Hamlet,' 'King Lear,' 'Shylock . . .' "Never mind those old ones, Mr. Mansfield," the supervisor interrupted. "What modern plays?" "You darn fool," Catlett exploded, "I've been dead 20 years!"

BERNARD GIMBEL went to Biaritz some years ago and met a man who professed to be the champ woodcutter of the Basque sector—and who was learning to box. "I'll show you a good trick," the ax man offered . . . He tore a match from a packet and inserted it between the sole and upper of Gimbel's shoe. Before Gimbel could protest, the ax descended. It cut the match in two—a fraction of an inch from Gimbel's toe. The amazed executive paled. "No more of that," he said, "I'm convinced that you're good, Mr. . . . what's your name again?" The ax man grinned in satisfaction. "Uzcudun," he informed. "Paolino Uzcudun."

Whalen, Chandler In Reporter Film

Michael Whalen and Chick Chandler, again pictured as members of the Fourth Estate, continue their adventures in "While New York Sleeps," second in the Roving Reporter series.

Direction of "While New York Sleeps" will be in the hands of H. Bruce Humberstone, director of the initial Roving Reporter venture, "Meridian 7-1212."

Included in the cast are Harold Huber in the role of "Marco," Joan Woodbury as "Nora," William Demarest as "Red Miller," and Marc Lawrence as "Happy Nelson," with additional assignments yet to be announced.

Glen Echo Park

Crowds of admirers and well wishers were on hand in the Spanish Garden ballroom, at Glen Echo Park, to welcome back Dave McWilliams and his band which bowed in last tnight. Also on hand was another local lad, Larry Hendrick, brought to the Glen Echo organization from the Hay-Adams House where he has distinguished himself at the organ.

And as in August came in on a terrific heat wave, the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo met the challenge and catered to swimmers of all ages. Other visitors made a bee line for the "World Cruise" where the underground boats give a new kind of thrill, taking the visitors to strange ports. Grown-ups as well as kids got a big kick out of the new Dodgem Rides, where new streamlined cars work like a charm. In the waterway canal business was booming night and day, as the fleet of modern boats skimmed over the water.

Three Coward Playlets Are Bill at Olney

Those Olneysian Fields on which Panjandrum Cochran has his finely equipped country playhouse echoed last night not only to some terrific thunder claps, but also some of Noel Coward's better lines in three one-act plays from his "Tonight at 8:30" series, starring Irene Purcell.

Far and away the best play of the evening and indeed of the entire group is "Fumed Oak" which was played to a delighted, if weather conscious, third-filled house. The situation of Henry Gow with his wife, daughter and mother-in-law in a dowdy room of all work in second-rate South London is a dreary one. His wife quarels with her mother, she scolds their daughter, and only pays him any attention in telling him to be off to work. How the worm turns fills the second scene of this choice comedy. As Henry Gow, Leslie Denison was well nigh perfect. His touch was sure and be it to his everlasting glory that he played a Noel Coward part in which he did not seem to be imitating Destiny's Tot. As his wife Miss Purcell seemed out of her tier, less successful with her cockney. For so charming a lady this is understandable. Elinor Cox Karsten and Elizabeth Ray Williams effectively completed the family.

Most controversial is "The Astonished Heart," the curtain raiser. Some one has called this play Mr. Coward's attempt to out-Hamlet Mr. Shakespeare and this reviewer thinks that a fair comment. The situation of the psychoanalist who needs some of his own treatment is a difficult one at best and it is here self-conscious, unreal, and neck high with lines that would draw a laugh out at Roadside. Here timber-voiced Miss Purcell appeared to more effective advantage playing with a sure, steady crescendo, building her scenes with admirable finish. As the level headed wife Zolya Talma carried her balance wheel with firmness. Elinor Cox Karsten was quietly effective as the nurse and Howard Furguson was the doctor's assistant.

Most typically Noel Coward of the trio is "Hands Across the Sea," which closed the evening, for here he deals with a feather-like idea so entertainingly, so sharply, that it seems like the most important play ever written. It is all very gay and here Miss Purcell is at her shining best. She is smart, sophisticated and seems very much herself. As the Hon. Clare, Zolya Talma showed a flippant line delivery as Gordon Richards and Miss Karsten were properly provincial.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 1.—"Boy Meets Girl" proves again that life in the movie colony is stranger than fiction. No trace of bitterness—just good, clean, hilarious fun giving Jimmy Cagney his best role. And Marie Wilson — whose own story would make an entertaining picture—her greatest chance. Always on the job and never once slops over. That dumb Dora role could so easily have been overdrawn.

HEDDA HOPPER

I've seen lots of producers at work and play, but never a goofier one than Ralph Bellamy in this picture.

Let's look at some of the real Hollywood happenings. When Moss Hart arrived on his first visit to produce "Once In a Lifetime" here, he was met at the station by an armored truck such as banks use for transporting gold, with gunmen in uniform. The studio publicity men tried to persuade Moss that this was the only safe conveyance for him to ride in and were hurt when he wouldn't even be photographed beside it.

Later, Moss was the twenty-fourth writer added to a list already working on a certain picture. He listened to the story for two weeks, got $10,000—his salary. Then, knowing he couldn't contribute anything, he turned the money back to the producers. Then he was hurt when they didn't even thank him.

Mary Pickford once scrapped a picture of "Coquette," costing about $300,000 and started all over again. Also one called "Shanty Town." She junked set and story—never did make it. Then she started one called "Sweethearts" and later renamed it "Forever After." Mary went half way through with it and then didn't like it. So she sold it to Joe Schenck for a profit of $100,000 and wound up making the picture for Joe, besides. Now, I ask you!

Remember the howl that went up when Doug Fairbanks, after testing hundreds of men, chose the late Mme. Comont, a woman, to play a Persian prince in "Thief of Bagdad" because she looked the part? He had a hard time finding his eunuchs. While looking up, watching a plasterer working on the set, he decided that that man was just the type. So Doug yelled for him to come down. The poor guy didn't know what he'd done, but knew he was about to lose his job. Doug asked him his age and weight while he trembled in his boots. Finally Doug asked him how much he got a day.

"Twelve dollars," replied the plasterer.

"You're fired," said Doug, "and rehired at $35 a day to play a eunuch."

The poor man tried to tell Doug he couldn't act. But he was hustled into the wardrobe department, dressed in silks, satins and laces, and worked straight through the picture. When it was finished, he went back to his old trade. So far as I know, he's still plastering.

When scenes required murals, Doug had them painted right to the top of the set where camera couldn't possibly reach them. When asked why, he said, "I think it gives actors such a feeling of reality." Being one himself, he should have known they spend most of their time looking into a mirror.

Then there's the story of one of our best writers who dictated half of his script over the long distance telephone from New York City and is still working for the same studio.

Nats Score 3 Runs In 10th, Nose Out Indians, 11 to 8

The Washington Post Sports

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, AUGUST 2, 1938 15

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, Aug. 1.—The swarthy-skinned man in the press box gave you the impression that he had seen many, many better pitchers when, watching Bob Feller strike out two Nats in the first inning today, he said: "Yeah, he's got pretty fair stuff. Pretty fair stuff."

POVICH

He sounded very professional when he said that and curiosity directed your glance at the speaker. That seam-lined face, so dark that it used to be the despair of photographers in the days before high speed cameras and that prominent nose were unmistakable. He was a professional all right. He was Roger Peckinpaugh.

"Pretty nice change of pace, too, that kid's got," said Peck, as a slow ball described a high arc and lazed across the plate for a called strike. "Reminds me a bit of old Urban Shocker. Except Shocker used to put on more of a show with his slow ball."

"How? Well, there never was a pitcher who could throw a slow one like Shocker. His slow ball never did look like it was going to get to the plate. He'd throw it 20 feet in the air sometimes. And he'd make an awful sucker out of a hitter, especially when he had two strikes on him and two were out. Shocker'd throw his slow one in that high arc and then start walking for the dugout, perfectly confident that the side was retired. By the time the ball came across the plate, Shocker would be across the foul line and headed for a drink of water."

Back in 1924, the name of Roger Peckinpaugh commanded something akin to reverence in Washington. He was "Peck" to thousands of Washington fans revelling in the Nats' first pennant triumph. The utter grace of his play around shortstop, and his engineering of the famous Peck-to-Harris-to-Judge double plays made the dark-skinned old-timer top-hole with Washington fans. They had never seen such shortstopping.

He was one of Clark Griffith's best gambles. In 1922, Griffith had paid $50,000 for Peck, then a veteran of 12 years in the big leagues and an important cog in the Yankees' pennant winning infield of 1921. Griffith appeared stung on that deal. Peck had a poor year in 1922. In 1923, he was a good shortstop, but not much of a hitter.

And then in 1924, along with Joe Judge and Sam Rice, another pair of veterans, Peck began to click. His play around shortstop was the sensation of the times. His was the poetry of motion, the pinnacle of the art. Washington fans alternately gasped and marveled at the superb excellence of the long-panted old timer who was having an unusual day when he didn't come up with at least two breath-taking plays.

* * * *

They put Washington in the world series that year—that combination of Peck-Harris-and-Judge which set a new record for double plays. And Washington fans learned not only to admire him, but to love him before that 1924 world series with the Giants was over.

Peck pulled a charley horse in the third game against the Giants. He went back into the fourth game and was forced out with his painful muscle injury. When the Giants won the fifth game, with Peck absent, Bucky Harris was desperate. He wanted Peck back in there. Strapped up like an Egyptian mummy, his right leg taped from his thigh to his foot, the old fellow went back to the line-up. He could hardly move. In that sixth game, he had only two fielding chances, both directly at him, and the Nats won.

Still strapped he went back into the line-up for the seventh game. Not until the ninth inning, with the Giants threatening to win, did a difficult chance came Peck's way. Then, on a high bounder through the box, Peck leaped behind second base for the ball. With a backhand flip to Bucky Harris at second base he started a force play and then nosedived into the dirt. He was through, unable to arise, much less walk. But that play had saved the game and the World Series for Washington. That night in Washington, Roger Peckinpaugh was Presidential timber.

"But let's not talk about that 1925 World Series," said Peck today. "I want to forget that one."

None of the members of that 1925 Washington team ever like to talk about that World Series with the Pirates. Bucky Harris walks away whenever that is the topic. The Nats still feel keenly the fact that they blew a lead of three games to one and lost the series to the Pirates.

* * * *

Baseball people will never understand Peck's utter collapse in that series. The greatest fielding shortstop of his time—perhaps ever—was a terrific flop. He muffed ground balls, made wild throws to the bases and dropped pop flies. He set a new record of eight errors by an individual in a World Series.

The more disgusted of the Washington fans hinted that Peck

Wes Ferrell to Hurl Opener With Browns

Special Dispatch to The Post

Cleveland, Aug. 1.—After acquiring their first victory on their Western swing today, the Nats moved on to St. Louis tonight for a three-game series with the Browns. Wes Ferrell is slated to pitch the opener for the Washington Club.

Macks Stop Tigers; Win Game, 4 to 0

Ross and Smith Allow Bengals But 9 Hits; Greenberg Halted.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 1.—The big guns of the Detroit Tigers were spiked today by Pitchers Lee Ross and Edgar Smith, of the Philadelphia Athletics. Ross and Smith combined to blank the Tigers, 4-0, with nine hits and end the Bengals' winning streak at eight straight.

Ross hurled five-hit ball until the first of the seventh when Dixie Walker, who batted for Roxie Lawson, the Tigers' starter, and Jo-Jo White singled. Smith came in and retired the side and had little trouble thereafter.

Ross, with two singles and three runs batted in, paced the A's attack.

The A's got all their runs off Lawson. Lou Finney doubled and scored on two infield outs in the first inning and in the second Sam Chapman's double and a single by Ross tallied another run.

An error by Hank Greenberg on Ace Parker's grounder after Hayes and Johnson had singled filled the bases for the Athletics in the sixth. After Wayne Ambler went out on a fly, Ross came up and pumped a long single to left scoring two runners.

The Tigers got three singles in their half of the sixth but couldn't score. Wally Moses threw out Hank Greenberg when he tried to go from first to third on Pete Fox's hit and Ross took care of Tebbetts on a grounder and Christman on a fly to Johnson.

Lefty Grove to Join Red Sox Today.

Cleveland, Aug. 1 (AP).—Manager Joe Cronin, of the Boston Red Sox, spending an off day watching the Indians and Senators game announced today Mose (Lefty) Grove, ace of the Boston staff, will join his mates here tomorrow and may start one of the four games against the Indians.

Grove has been out of action since his arm went numb during a game in Boston last month. Without his southpaw artistry the Red Sox have faltered on their current invasion of the West.

Travis' Low Throw Gives Indians Run in Second

Hal Trosky, Cleveland first sacker, is shown as he slid into third base in the second inning of the game with the Nats at Cleveland yesterday. Travis' throw to Lewis at third was low and the Indian dashed home. The Nats won the game in the tenth inning with a three-run splurge, 11 to 8.

Giant Club Buys Cissell

Orioles Will Get Ryan on Option.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 1.—The New York Giants today announced the purchase of the veteran second baseman, Chalmer Cissell, from Baltimore of the International League.

The price tag was not announced. As replacement, the Giants are sending John (Blondy) Ryan to the Baltimore Club on option.

Cissell, now 34 and a veteran of 10 years in and out of the big show, will play second for the Giants in tomorrow's game here against the Chicago Cubs. Cissell has a batting average of .296 in 94 games with the Orioles this season and has fielded brilliantly.

Cissell's purchase is aimed to solve the most distressing problem Manager Bill Terry has had this season. First he lost Burgess Whitehead, star second sacker of his 1936 and 1937 championship teams, through an operation.

Lou Chiozza, after a good start, proved inadequate to fill Whitehead's shoes, and Terry obtained Alex Kampouris from Cincinnati in exchange for Wally Berger. Kampouris likewise failed to fill the bill, and recently has been on the injured list. The job is wide open for Cissell.

The Chicago White Sox originally bought Cissell from Portland, of the Pacific Coast League, in 1927, for $75,000 cash and players valued at $48,000. He remained with the White Sox until 1932, when he was traded to Cleveland.

Orioles Will Get Ryan on Option.

Baltimore, Aug. 1 (AP).—Bill Cissell, infielder who has played with American League teams in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, was sold today by the International League Orioles to the New York Giants.

John Ogden, Oriole general manager, said it was a straight cash transaction. The Orioles will receive Blondy Ryan, reserve Giant infielder, on option for the remainder of the season.

Cissell's batting average for the current season is .293. He has scored 112 hits during 382 times at bat, knocking out 5 homers, 5 triples and 16 doubles.

Rain Prevents Fights; Card Is Set Tomorrow

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Some 1,000 fans with little faith in weather reports and an all-consuming interest in boxing were driven to cover by a drenching rainstorm last night at Griffith Stadium, where they had assembled to see Ivan Nedomatsky, of Baltimore, and Steve Mamakos, of this city, mar one another's features in an eight-round bout.

The weatherman predicted showers, but none of those in the audience believed him, apparently, despite the fact that he correctly predicted damp weather for seven of eight previous shows. The incident may have served to increase their faith in human nature—particularly the Weather Bureau.

Promoter Joe Turner and his partner, Goldie Ahearn, displayed proper respect for the forecaster's talent, however, by deciding to postpone the show until tomorrow night after hearing that more rain is predicted for this evening.

Johnny Tejera, of Richmond, and Frankie Martini, of Baltimore, finished the first round of a scheduled six-round joust before the first few bucketfuls of rain spilled on the premises. There was a general exodus from the sparsley filled ringside chairs as the customers sought refuge in the grandstand, but the fighters came out for another round, indicating that the show would go on.

But, at the end of the session with the red light over his corner indicating Tejera ahead on points, Announcer Jimmy Lake grabbed his microphone and in squishy tones announced the postponement. Nobody seemed to mind.

Heine Blaustein, Nedomatsky's manager, announced that he will insist on Mamakos weighing-in again tomorrow afternoon. The Washington gladiator agreed to weigh under 150 pounds for the bout. The entire card will be held over.

The Gildea Greek had a slight pull in weights at weighing-in time, scaling 146¾ pounds to 145¼ for Nedomatsky. At ringside, with the customary 4 p. m. steak assimilated, this would have increased to approximately 5 pounds under normal conditions. Mamakos experienced difficulty making the prescribed maximum and visited the commission office early in the morning to see how he weighed on the official scales.

Nedomatsky, as cool as ice tea while Inspector Eneas McCarthy juggled the balancing bar, and almost over-confident of whipping the District lad, looked in the pink. He indicated that he wouldn't place his trust wholly in a knockout, but planned to utilize his admittedly superior boxing skill to the utmost. He admitted to a wholesome respect for Steve's stamina, but didn't think he would be much trouble.

Mamakos had nothing to say. He greeted Tony Ciaccio, whom he fought here several months ago, and other acquaintances, but kept his counsel. He, too, looked ready for the bell and anxious to get into action.

Weights of other fighters on the card were as follows: Tony Ciacco (152¼) vs. Tommy Bland (147), eight-round semifinal; Lloyd Lasky, substituting for Johnny Dude (134¾) vs. Joey Green (134¾), six rounds; Johnny Tejera (142½) vs. Frankie Martini (135), six rounds; Willie Cooper, erroneously referred to as Cooper earlier in the week, (142¼) vs. Kid Howie (135¾.)

County Teams Split.

The Prince Georges Athletic Club nine defeated the Dixie Pigs, 7-3, in the first game of a double-header yesterday. Davis outpitched Moran all the way. But the Dixie Pig lads came back to register a 7-6 victory in the nightcap. Both games were played at McGruder Park.

Bees Get Joe Stripp From Cards for Cash.

Boston, Aug. 1 (AP).—John Quinn, Boston Bees' secretary, today announced Joe Stripp, veteran infielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, had been obtained in a straight cash transaction.

Stripp may see action in the Bees' opener with the Pittsburgh Pirates here tomorrow in view of Manager Casey Stengel's dissatisfaction with the infield's hitting strength.

The tall third baseman has been hitting .286 in 53 games this year, and at that figure would be second only to Debs Carns as the Boston club's leading hitter.

Wins Chase After Falling

Itsamaid Pays $19.50 at Bel Air.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fair Grounds, Bel Air, Md., Aug. 1.—Six thousand turf fans couldn't believe their eyes when James C. Clark's Itsamaid fell three fences from home in the Gunpowder Steeplechase, and Jockey John Nickols, of Middleburg, Va., remounted to come on and win the race.

Itsamaid had just taken the lead when she fell at the thirteenth fence. Nickols, who has been riding for 10 years, hung to the mare. Remounting, he came from sixth place, and making up 30 lengths, won by five lengths. She paid $19.50. Nickols received an ovation from the fans as he brought Itsamaid back to the scales.

Single wagering and daily double payoff records were established today. Bernard Bond's Sure Miss in winning the opening race, paid $100.90, supplanting the old mark of $77.40.

Antonio Medalist In Southpaw Play

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 1 (AP).—For the second straight year Alex Antonio, of the Roselle Golf Club, Linden, N. J., today won the qualifying medal in the national left-handers 36 holes on the Westchester Country golf tournament, carding a 156 over Club course.

Americans Steal Show

Perrin Walker Double Winner in London.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 1.—America's picked athletes dominated the international track meet in White City Stadium today in spite of the combined opposition of rivals from 16 other nations.

A crowd of 33,500 saw the American team of ten romp off with 7 of the 14 events and pile up an overwhelming margin over all rivals in total points, although no team title was officially at stake.

Perrin Walker, former Georgian who now runs in the colors of the New York A. C., was the only double winner—winning both the 100 and 220 yard sprints. He whipped the fleet Hollander, M. B. Osendarp, by a yard in the century in 9.9 seconds and then took the 220 by inches from the same rival in 21.7 seconds.

Other American victories were hung up by Jack Patterson, of Rice; Allan Tolmich, of Wayne University; Chuck Fenske, of Wisconsin; Cornelius Warmerdam, of the San Francisco Olympic Club, and Mel Walker, of Toledo, the Ohio State Negro jumper.

Patterson made a new British record of 53 seconds flat in winning the 440-yard low hurdles, while Tolmich sprang a mild upset in conquering the British timber-topping ace, D. O. Finlay, in the 120-yard high hurdles in 14.6 seconds.

Fenske, robbed of a chance to match his speed with Sydney Wooderson, the world mile record-holder, easily won the mile event in 4:19. Wooderson established i

Griffs Chase Feller; Win Game on 3 Hits

Tribe's Star Yields 8 Blows in 5 Frames and Gives Way to Humphries; Defeat Drops Cleveland 2½ Behind Yanks.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, Aug. 1.—It happened here today, honest. The Nats won a ball game. After trying devious ways to accumulate their sixth straight defeat without success, they suddenly reformed and stopped a Cleveland winning streak which had reached five straight games. They licked the Indians, 11 to 8, in 10 innings, and moved back into fourth place.

To 5,000 Cleveland customers, and also the Indians, the Nats' reform was shocking. With two out in the ninth and the Indians holding an 8-7 lead, the home folks were counting the game won. And then Buddy Myer, with a last ditch single to center, drove the tying run across the plate and sent the game into extra innings.

To 5,000 Cleveland customers, and also the Indians, the Nats' reform was shocking. With two out in the ninth inning and the Indians holding an 8-7 lead, the home folks were counting the game won. And then Buddy Myer, with a last ditch single to center, drove the tying run across the plate and sent the game into extra innings.

Hogsett Opens the Way.

Thus put back in the ball game, the Nats became downright mean about it and gave three Cleveland pitchers a thorough going-over in the tenth. Elon Hogsett, who had been doing a whale of a job as a relief pitcher for the Nats, surprised everybody, including himself, by opening the tenth inning with a single to center and the rally was on.

George Case sacrificed Hogsett to second and then Buddy Lewis, making his third hit of the game, knocked a single to center and Johnny Humphries out of the box. That blow, scoring Hogsett with the run that put the Nats in a 9-8 lead, brought big Willis Hudlin hurrying to the scene, but Hudlin brought no relief to the Indians.

The first thing Hudlin did was to pick up Al Simmons' hot smash into the box and throw it wide of second base with the result that everybody was safe. And then Ossie Bluege, who had found his way into the game very inconspicuously as a pinch runner for Zeke Bonura the inning before, suddenly became very conspicuous.

Feller Knocked Out.

He became very conspicuous by hitting the longest ball ever to leave his bat in recent seasons—a terrific 400-foot blast to the left center fence which evolved as a two-bagger and sent Lewis and Simmons scooting across the plate.

The Indians didn't have any answer for that. Old Elon, who had taken up the pitching in the eighth when Jimmy DeShong found the going rough, checked in with a beautiful job of it. He didn't allow the Indians a hit, and in the tenth, just by way of sealing his triumph, he struck out a pair of Cleveland pinch hitters.

Before this, perhaps, it should have been mentioned that the Nats, in achieving their first victory of their Western swing, knocked none other than Bob Feller out of the box. That happened in the sixth inning when the Nats came from behind to tie the score at 6-6.

Nats Get 14 Hits.

All told, the Nats collected 14 hits off four Cleveland pitchers, while Dutch Leonard, Joe Krakauskas, Jimmy DeShong and Hogsett were limiting the Injuns to 7 hits.

At one point in the proceedings the Indians had a 5-1 yead—as early as the third inning. In those early innings, the Nats were apparently persisting in throwing the ball game away. Cecil Travis made a wild throw to third that led to two Cleveland runs and Leonard wild-pitched a run across in the third inning after Heath tripled.

But with the departure of Leonard at the end of the third inning, the Nats were blessed with some charming relief pitching. In the last seven innings the Indians made only two—no kidding, two—hits. Joe Krakauskas was something of a sensation. Pitching the fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh innings, Krakky flashed his blazing speed at the Indians.

Nats at Tie in Sixth.

Today, except for one wild spell in the seventh inning, Krakauskas looked nothing like the Borneo Krakauskases. He fanned two in the fourth, one in the fifth and struck out the side in the sixth.

The Nats hacked away at Feller until they tied the score at 6 to 6 in the sixth. Lewis drove over a run in the third inning with a single to center and in the fourth, after Feller had walked a pair and pitched a single to Buddy Myer, George Case drove home 2 runs with a Texas League single that fell at the feet of a young army of Indians in futile pursuit.

That cut the Injuns' lead to 5 to

Naval Academy Gets Sims of Georgia Tech

Special Dispatch to The Post

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 1.—Ed Sims, sophomore center of Georgia Tech last year, has entered the Naval Academy with the new plebe class, and will report with the squad of that class on August 15.

Sims, a powerful and active youth of 195 pounds, is now entered as a heavyweight in the boxing tournament of the new class.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

Introducing: The Nats' Man of the Month for July.

He was 21-year-old John Kelly (Buddy) Lewis, who out performed every other member of the Washington Club during July to win The Washington Post-Wheaties Man of the Month contest.

LEWIS.

Lewis, who thus takes a place beside Johnny Stone, May's Man of the Month, and Al Simmons, who won the June contest, will be presented by The Post with a $50 merchandise order on any Washington store of his preference.

The Nats young third baseman averaged one point per day during July, amassing a total of 31 points for the month and beating out George Case and Buddy Myer for the honors in the waning days of the month. Case finished with 29 points and Myer was in third place with 26.

Myer held an apparently commanding lead in the contest 10 days ago, but yielded it to Case, who made a sensational splurge before the Nats departed for the West. In the West, Case slumped at bat and earned only two points during the Nats' last five games of the month.

The final score for July:

The Score.
Buddy Lewis	31	Jimmy Wasdell	11
George Case	29	Harry Kelley	10
Buddy Myer	26	Wes Ferrell	9
Sam West	22	Elon Hogsett	7
Cecil Travis	20	Pete Appleton	5
Rick Ferrell	18	Ossie Bluege	3
Dutch Leonard	15	Joe Krakauskas	3
Taft Wright	15	Angelo Giuliani	3
Al Simmons	14	"Goose" Goslin	2
Zeke Bonura	14	Ken Chase	2
Monte Weaver	12	Jimmy DeShong	1

Lewis gets away to a flying start in the August Man of the Month contest as a result of his performance at Cleveland yesterday. The ten points awarded on the basis of that game are distributed as follows:

To Lewis, three points, because he made three hits, drove in four runs and was responsible for the winning run in the tenth.

To Buddy Myer, three points, because with two out in the ninth, he singled to keep the Nats in the ball game.

To Elon Hogsett, two points, because he held the Indians scoreless in the last 2 1-3 innings and started the winning rally in the tenth with a single.

To Joe Krakauskas, one point, because in 4 2-3 innings as a relief pitcher he allowed only two hits and no earned runs.

Bill Ackerman on Fishing

Bay fishing in general isn't exactly what one might expect at this season, for with the summer lethargy of the hardheads, and the schools of rock a little choosy about rising to the lures, there is more than one fishing point, that failed to report a sizable catch over the week-end.

ACKERMAN.

At Piney Point there are a few sea trout being caught, but it is still too early to expect very much from them. Several fair catches of rock were made there last week.

At Tilghman's the large black drum that usually feed in the mouth of the Choptank throughout August have started to bite and several really large ones have been taken. Several small catches of blues have also been made in this section. On Thursday, one boat hit a school on the way back to the western shore, and took 16, weighing up to 2 pounds, with feathers.

At Wachaprague, few sea trout are being caught, and channel bass seem to be non-existent, although at Cape Charles, they are continuing to hit the plugs of bait-casters on the outer edge of the surf, as well as bottom fishing in the several deep holes just off shore. Cabio continue to run in the schools of small blues, which are more than plentiful.

The almost incessant rain of the past ten days has succeeded fairly well in putting the Indian sign on anglers along the Jersey beaches, for catches have been exceedingly poor. The break, over the week-end, should start them taking the hook again.

The one fish to be depended upon to hit right now is the succulent Norfolk spot, and if the tackle is light enough, to give most anyone a swell day's sport. Bloodworms on small hooks, and you can get them from Colonial Beach on the Potomac, down, and around the bay to South River.

State financial support of a plan to increase the supply of salmon in the Penobscot River in Maine, and to improve the fishing in Bangor's famous pool, was announced over the week-end, by way of matching, from State funds, the $500 of the Penobscot River Salmon Committee, which will use the money in constructing a holding pen in Burr Brook at the upper end of the Salmon Pool. All fish caught between now and spawning time will be placed in this pen, and the spawn stripped from them placed in the Federal Hatchery at Orland, so that great numbers of fry will be available for planting in the stream next season.

Record July rains have been tough on the bass fishermen, but its truly been "great weather for ducks." Really a timely boon during a critical period in the three provinces of the great Canadian "duck factory."

As a result of this rainy period, More Game Birds Foundation expects the largest crop of wild duck in recent years, for by tabulation, they have found over 20 per cent of our ducks breed in this section, and where, during the past several years, untold millions of ducklings have perished in the dry months of July and August.

The present timely and copious precipitation, which covered the whole of Manitoba and Alberta, and all but a narrow strip of Saskatchewan, with a continuance of favorable weather conditions, coupled with waterfowl restoration under way, should assure a very satisfactory crop of ducks in the southern parts of the provinces this year.

The world-record sailfish mounted in Miami by Al Pflueger was shipped last week by its captor, E. K. Tremayne, of the Royal Cornwell Yacht Club, Falmouth, Cornwell, England. When taken off the Galapagos Islands last January the fish tipped the scales at 190 pounds. Tremayne was fishing as a guest aboard T. O. M. Sopwith's yacht.

West Virginia's hunting regulations, just issued for the season of 1938, are right in line with the curtailed hunting nimrods have been schooled to during the past two years under Federal regulation of wildfowl hunting.

But while the latter have been eased slightly this season, the former seems to have been tightened, but we believe the West Virginia Conservation Commission is doing a real job, and to the end that if not next year, surely in the one following, hunting conditions in every section of the State will be better.

One buck deer will be allowed; to be taken on December 1, 2 and 3 . . . One or both horns must be branched.

Gray, black or fox squirrels, 4 a day, 24 the season, which is the same in all counties, October 15 to November 30. One turkey will be allowed during a season; that is the same as that on squirrels.

Rabbits, all counties, November 7 to December 3, both dates inclusive. Four a day and 24 for the season.

The seasons on upland birds—quail, same dates as for rabbits, 6 a day and 36 for the season, while grouse is October 15 to November 30; 3 a day and 12 for the season.

The commission reminds all those interested in the restoration of quail hunting that full co-operation is required in reporting banded quail taken in any manner, to a local game protector or direct to the commission.

Pilot Is Suspended For Attacking Umpire

Durham, N. C., Aug 1 (AP).—President W. G. Bramham, of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, announced today that H. E. (Ducky) Holmes, president and manager of the Dayton Club of the Middle Atlantic League, had been suspended for 120 playing days, effective July 22. Bramham said the suspension was ordered after an investigation of charges that Holmes attacked Umpire Charles Whittle in a game at Dayton July 22.

Bryan Grant Also Winner On First Day

Two Favorites, Harman and Cooke, Meet Reverses.

By the Associated Press.

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Top-seeded Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, led a field of 66 into the second round of the Meadow Club's forty-eighth invitation grass court tennis tournament today, but two of his favored companions, Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., and Bobby Harman, of Oakland, Calif., were eliminated in the first round.

Riggs, the Nation's second-ranking player, lost a set to a fellow Chicagoan as he mixed good tennis with his efforts to amuse the gallery. The scores were 6—4, 4—6, 6—3.

Harman, seeded sixth, was crushed by Archie Henderson, of Chapel Hill, N. C., 6—0, 6—0. Henderson, a graduate student at the University of North Carolina, simply overpowered his rival.

Cooke, runner-up to Riggs at Sea Bright last week and seeded fourth here, bowed to Robert Kamrath, of Austin, Tex., 6—3, 8—10, 6—2. Kamrath, leading, 6—5, in the second set, reached match point four times only to lose his advantage because of overcautiousness when he remained in the back court.

McNeill Wins.

Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, the Nation's ninth ranking player, who wasn't seeded because an ankle injury had kept him idle for a couple of weeks, returned to action with a sparkling 6—2, 6—1 victory over Charles Harris, of West Palm Beach, Fla. He appeared to be close to his best form.

The other seeded entries, Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, No. 2; Joe Hunt, of Los Angeles, No. 3; Frank Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., No. 5; Hal Surface, of Kansas City, No. 7, and Sidney B. Wood, of New York, the former Davis Cup player, No. 8, all came through in straight sets.

Grant breezed through Doug Imhoff, of Long Beach, Calif., 6—3, 6—4. Hunt eliminated Robert Kerdasha, of Clinton, S. C., 6—2, 6—1. Kovacs advanced at the expense of Howard Stephens, jr., of St. Louis, captain of the Yale tennis team, 6—4, 6—4. Surface disposed of Wilson Rood, of Brooklyn and the University of North Carolina, 6—1, 6—4, and Wood beat Bryan Hamlin, of Bridge Hampton, N. Y., 6—1, 6—0.

Invaders Advance.

Two seeded foreign players, Charles Hare, former English Davis Cup player, and Robert Mouvert, of Belgium, advanced without much trouble. Hare dropped a set to a strong opponent, J. Norman Anderson, of New York, winning, 6—2, 3—6, 6—4, while Mouvert whipped George Scherbatoff, of New York, 6—2, 6—3.

Another former Davis Cup star, Frank Shields, of Hollywood, Calif., won out over Lawrence Condon, of New York, 7—5, 7—5.

First Round.

Gilbert Hunt, Washington, D. C., defeated Harris Everett, Miami, Fla., 6—1, 6—1.

Archibald Henderson, Chapel Hill, N. C., defeated Robert Harman, Oakland, Calif., 6—0, 6—0.

J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., defeated John Foreman, Chicago, 6—1, 6—0.

Owen Anderson, Los Angeles, defeated George Toley, Miami, Fla., 6—4, 6—4.

Caldwell Robbitt, Atlanta, Ga., defeated Gardner Mulloy, Miami, Fla., 6—3, 10—12, 8—6.

Bryan M. Grant, jr., Atlanta, defeated Douglas Imhoff, Long Beach, Calif., 6—3, 6—4.

Gordon Campbell, Easthampton, N. Y., defeated Barney Welsh, Rockville, Md., 4—6, 6—3, 9—7.

Nats

3, and, in the fifth, Al Simmons lofted one of Feller's pitches over the rightfield wall for a homer to make it 5 to 4. It was 6 to 4 in the same inning when Krakky wild-pitched a run home, but in the sixth, after Myer and Krakky beat out infield hits, Feller walked a pair to force in a run. Then, when Humphries relieved Feller, Simmons tied the score on an infield out.

In the seventh the Indians, for the second time in the game, scored two runs without benefit of a hit. Krakky walked Lary and hit Campbell in the groin before getting anybody out, but he would have escaped undamaged had not Zeke Bonura picked up Heath's grounder and, with an easy play at the plate, threw the ball into the dirt for an error.

That made it 8-6 and apparently won the game for the Indians, but in the seventh Humphries walked Rick Ferrell, Hemsley committed a passed ball and the handy Lewis youth produced another single that drove over a run.

It was 8-7 going into the ninth and Humphries started that inning by fanning Simmons, but Zeke Bonura created some tension by swatting a single to center. When Humphries walked Travis to put the tying run on second, Bluege was sent in to run for Bonura. The Nats' hopes took a nose dive when West fanned for the second out, but Buddy Myer snatched victory from the Indians with his single to center that scored Bluege and sent the game into the overtime.

You know what happened then.

District Pros Wrangle; May Abandon Exhibition Matches

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

Nice Work, Etc.

New York, Aug. 1.—There were really a lot of excuses for the flight. Pop Meyers, who isn't called Pop Simly because he is father of the 500-mile Indianapolis automobile race, was in town and he never had been in a plane. That would have been sufficient reason in itself. Of course, Pop never has been in a racing car either but once, still it did seem that Pop ought to find out what flying was like. Then, besides, Eddie Rickenbaker was coming in on the Normandie and it certainly seemed that he should be welcomed in the manner to which he is accustomed. Of course, we couldn't put on a welcome like they did when he came home after the war, ace of aces and the individual hero of the American air service.

VIDMER.

We couldn't stage a banquet as the automobile show officials did on that return from Europe 20 years ago, or have him ride through the streets in an airplane made of flowers like they did out in Los Angeles. But it did seem proper to welcome him. Anyway it was another reason for going.

And in the third place it was frightfully hot on the ground. So Stephen Jerome Hannagan gathered together some of Rick's friends, lured Pop Meyers to the airport, persuaded Dick Merrill to trundle out one of the Eastern Air Line's great silver fleet and we took off.

I must say it was a splendid idea, and I heartily recommend it as a pleasant way to spend a hot afternoon, just in case you haven't anything else to do.

It was interesting sweeping out over the ocean, searching for the ship, pointing out familiar spots along the shore. There were the Statue of Liberty, Staten Island, Governor's Island, the Aquarium, and there was Coney Island, the beach thick with people desperate for a breath of sea air.

"And this is a Monday afternoon, too," Bill Corum said. "Figure what it must be like on a hot Sunday."

Corrigan Influence.

There were the Rockaways and then an endless stretch of clear green ocean. We were moving east to sea on a tail wind that was blowing 50 miles an hour. Dick Merrill's eyes were alight with eagerness.

"Umm-umm," he murmured, then added in his Mississippi drawl. "Boy, we sure could go across today."

"Across what?" asked Pop Meyers, sudden alarm in his voice.

"Across the Atlantic. Say, with this wind we'd be in England in no time."

"How long would it take, Dick?"

"Not more than 15 hours. Let's see, we could be in Piccadilly before the night clubs closed."

"Well, why not?" asked Bill.

"Now wait a minute," interrupted John Kiernan, who isn't too fond of night clubs even on this side of the ocean. "How have you got your compass set? Remember what happened to Corrigan."

Everybody laughed and Merrill said, "It's set for New York—I think."

Just then somebody yelled, "Ship ahoy!" and looking down we could see the three black and red funnels of the Normandie rising out of the green ocean. Merrill tipped the nose down and we started to circle. Lower and lower we flew, until we could make out the figures on deck.

"There he is!" said Steve Hannaghan. "Up there in the bow. See in the white suit, waving his hands."

Welcome Home.

And sure enough there was Eddie Rickenbacker. He had seen the big letters on the wings—E A L—and obviously knew that his friends were aboard the plane. The sight of Rick, general manager of Eastern Air, apparently made Merrill forget about how the wind was blowing toward England's isle and he continued to circle the ship, always keeping to the windward side, however.

"Because that black smoke coming out of the funnels would give us quite a tilt if it got under our wings," he explained. "That's the way it is flying over mountains. If you keep on the windward side when you get to them they give you a lift right over and set you down on the other side. But if you try to go over a mountain to leeward you get pulled down 200 feet before you know it.

"Say, I'm glad you know about things liks that," Jim Kahn laughed.

"High high are we flying?" Stu Cameron inquired.

"We have to keep up 500 feet over the water. It's the law," Merrill explained with a twinkle in his eye. It looked as though you could put a leg out of a window and dangle your foot in the ocean. Still, if he said it was 500 feet, I wouldn't argue.

"When Harry Richman and I flew back from England we were just skimming the water," Merrill said. "We were so low we thought we were going to hit an iceberg any minute."

"Why?"

"We had to come down to get out of the terrific head winds. If we hadn't we never would have made it. Flying from this side across the Atlantic is like going down hill, but coming back it's a stiff climb. The wind across the ocean has been westward only once in ten years. That's why ocean hoppers never make the return trip by air."

Entire Pro Schedule Is Left in Air

Cliff Spencer's 67 Wins Sweepstakes Event; Two Have 68.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The status of the District Open Championship, Sunday Afternoon Professional exhibition matches and other tournaments on the local pros' card was left hanging in the air yesterday at Kenwood where the mentors met with George Diffenbaugh but failed to agree on the fall schedule.

The day proved profitable only for Cliff Spencer, the Beaver Dam mentor, who knocked three shots off par with a 34, 33—67 to win the sweepstakes event that preceded the meeting. George Diffenbaugh and Lewis Worsham, jr., Chevy Chase assistant, split the runner-up purse with two under par 68s.

After the question as to how the Sunday afternoon matches would be played, match or medal play, on what courses and between what players, had been discussed the pros had decided to adopt a suggestion of the writer and pattern the exhibitions after the recent Cincinnati match play event, where 15 players competed, each played the other and the one that finished with the highest plus holes was the winner.

Snag Over Teams.

The dates and courses had been virtually agreed upon, when the team selection hit a snag, as to whether assistant professionals would be allowed to play. The plan was to invite 12 pros, and Lewis Worsham, the Chevy Chase assistant, would certainly have to be included on this list due to his fine play over the season.

The pros in attendance, Diffenbaugh, Cliff Spencer, Mel Shorey, Leo Walper, Danny Burton, Al Price, Robert Barnett, Worsham, Gene Larkin, Tony Sylvester, Frank Cunningham and Al Jamison, already tired by the 80-minute parley that had produced nothing in the way of results, then decided to call it a day.

Whether the matches will be revived in the near future depends upon whether or not a meeting is called, although after yesterday's affair the chances are very slim that the fans will be treated to the matches that they supported last year.

The District open championship, whose purse was boosted last year by the donations from the clubs where the pros played the Sunday matches, may be discarded as without a purse of some sort it would be hardly worthwhile playing for just the entry fees.

In Mood to Argue.

Diffenbaugh, who called the meeting in an attempt to restore interest in the tournaments that were discussed, did his part but it was to no avail as the pro golfers were just in an argumentative mood, and although a few were partial to calling another meeting within a week or two, others were of the opinion that the pros here may be split because of the disagreements.

Whether assistant pros are eligible to play in certain tourneys in the city has long been a sore spot with the mentors, regardless of the youngsters' ability. Worsham now ranks among the top half-dozen players in the city and to leave him off the team would weaken the matches' drawing ability.

Spencer put on a great finish to earn the sweepstakes triumph, 3, 3, 3, 3 on the last four holes, three strokes under regulation figures. Worsham missed a 4-foot putt on the final green for a tying 67. He played the back nine in 33, 2 under par.

Diffenbaugh played the back nine first and was 2 over par with a 37. He scorched the front nine with a 31 that included five birdies to tie Worsham with a 68.

Playground Swim Today

Some 4,000 youngsters are expected to participate today in the Public Recreation qualifying swimming meets to be staged at eight pools throughout the city. The meets listed at McKinley, Anacostia, Takoma, East Potomac, Banneker and Francis pools are scheduled at 10 o'clock, while those at Georgetown and Rosedale will be run off at 2 p. m.

Boys placing first, second and third in today's meets will qualify for the city finals, listed at McKinley and Banneker pools on Friday at 2 o'clock. The 500-odd boys who advance to the finals will battle for medals and scrolls of merit, the medals going to those who win.

Each contestant is limited to participation in one event and a relay, and each playground is limited to three entries in each event.

These meets are a part of the Public Recreation swimming program, conducted under the direction of the co-ordinated recreation committee, with Max Farrington, of the Department of Playgrounds, in charge.

135-pound class—50-yard free style, 50-yard breast stroke, 25-yard back stroke, 100-yard relay.

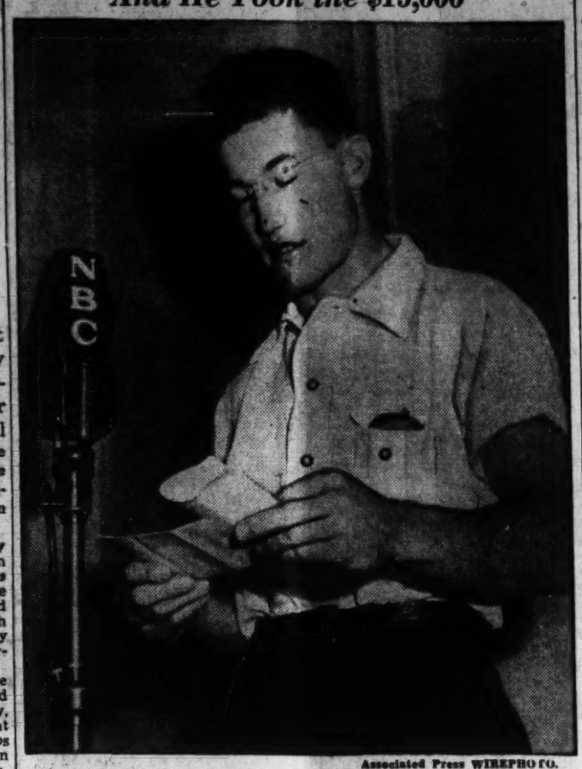
And He Took the $15,000



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Byron (Whizzer) White, Colorado's All-America football sensation last season, took time out from his radio rehearsal yesterday to announce that he had changed his mind and would accept the Pittsburgh Pirates' offer of $15,000 to play football this season. He will enter Oxford in January.

'Whizzer' White Accepts Pro Grid Offer From Pirate Club

Colorado's All-American Sensation Will Play This Season and Then Enter Oxford.

By the Associated Press.

Denver, Aug. 1.—Byron (Whizzer) White, who toyed for months with the choice between playing professional football for $15,000 in one season or traveling to England and Oxford on a Rhodes Scholarship, is going to do both.

Colorado University's All-America football star informed newspapermen today he would play this fall with the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Once the football campaign is over, he will sail to England and enroll at Oxford in January. The 21-year-old giant said he reached this decision only after "a certain group of English authorities" had assured him he could defer his entrance until midyear.

Blond Byron, stripped to shirt sleeves for rehearsal as master of ceremonies of a radio program tonight, said it "wasn't a case of changing my mind.

"If it was still a choice between the scholarship and pro football, my decision would be the same as it was in June when I picked Oxford. But now that it's definite I can play football and still go to England—well, what would you do?"

White, who led the Nation's grid scoremakers last season with 122 points, said he has not yet signed a contract with Pittsburgh and would not sign until he goes East.

He said "I don't believe I will" when asked if he intends to play in the game between the All-Star college team and the Washington Redskins, 1937 pro champions, at Chicago, August 31.

At Pittsburgh, Coach Johnny Blood, of the Pirates, said White had agreed to report to the team's Pennsylvania training camp August 10 and was denied permission to appear in the charity contest.

M. A. Junior Event Today

With Otto Greiner, the Rodgers Forge sensation, in a favored role, a field of 18, under 21 years of age, will seek the Middle Atlantic Junior championship today over the Indian Spring course, at 36 holes.

Greiner's impressive string of victories already this year, including the Maryland State amateur and medal junior and collegiate championships, the Middle Atlantic-Amateur and medal and low simonpure in the Maryland Open, establish him as the man to beat, although the field is strong for a junior event.

Billy Shea, the District Junior titleholder; Jerry Hart, former Arkansas State Junior champ, who will be 21 on Saturday; Buddy Sharkey, the host club's scholastic champion, and Bobby Brownell, of Manor, a former District amateur and Maryland junior champion, are all threats to the crown held by Johnny Farrell, of Hillendale, who has been overlooked in the star-studded field.

Greiner and Nathan Kaufman, Suburban, finished all square with Sharkey and Brownell in a practice round over the Four Corners course yesterday, with Greiner's 75 the best score. The local youths had 76 and Kaufman, 77.

Shea lost last year's tourney via the play-off route to Farrell, with Brownell third.

Pairings:

9 a. m. and 1 p. m.—Earl Skinner (Col.), Jim Stephens (A. and N.) and Jack Robinson (Indian Spring).

9:05 and 1:05—Ralph Bogart (A. and N.), Ed Boswell (Rolling Road) and George O. Vass (Kenwood).

9:10 and 1:10—Jack Bierman (Rolling Road), George Rice (Rolling Road) and Buddy Titus (A. and N.).

9:15 and 1:15—Buddy Sharkey (Indian Spring), Cliff Gruver (Wash.) and John Farrell (Hillendale).

9:20 and 1:20—Otto Greiner (Rodgers Forge), Nathan Kaufman (Suburban) and Bobby Brownell (Indian Spring).

D. C. Golfers Top Printers At Pittsburgh

Balestri's 75 Is Best in Field! Others Well Up First Day.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 1.—If the first day's play can be used as a criterion of what to expect in the remaining three days then the Washington, D. C., contingent entered in the fifteenth renewal of the Union Printers International Golf Association championship, which got under way here today at Edgewood, stands a good chance of copping the individual title and also of retaining the two-man Chicago team trophy.

Playing through a steady downpour and over the rain-drenched course, Joe Balestri, who draws his pay from Uncle Sam for bookbinding, got off to a nice start by pacing the field of more than 100 starters with a brilliant 36—39—75 for a two-stroke margin over his nearest rival, Eddie Rack, of McKeesport, Pa.

G. Fred Stringer and Ed Merkle, also from the Nation's Capital, who won the two-man trophy at Baltimore a year ago, got off to a shaky start and stymied with 84s, while C. E. Purdy posted an 85. F. Wineriter was the only other Washingtonian to break 90, turning in a card of 88.

Other Washington scorers: R. F. Nicholson, 111; J. M. Walker, 103; E. R. Kipp, 96; H. Byrokland, 106; N. A. Dent, 93; C. E. Barnard, 95; A. W. Herman, 100; E. B. Heimer, 92.

Balestri didn't allow the discouraging elements to mar his game. He played the first nine in perfect fashion, but he had to bag two birdies to overcome two promiscuous strokes to stay even with par. On the back nine he had seven par holes, but two 6s, one on a par 4 stretch, and the other on a par 5, skyrocketed his back nine to 39 and spoiled his chances of finishing all even with the conventional figures. His card with par:

Par out	443	534	454	—36
Balestri out	453	435	444	—36
Par in	443	434	554	—36—72
Balestri in	443	634	654	—39—75

Scores of the first 18 holes included:

Favorites Sweep Tourney at Culver

Culver, Ind., Aug. 1 (AP).—Pretournament favorites swept through the initial round of the national junior tennis meet here today after getting off to a late start because of wet courts.

Victor Seixas, of Philadelphia, seeded first in the boys' division, did not extend himself to beat Lawrence Daly, of Evanston, Ill., 6—1, 6—1. Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, top-ranking junior star, won by default from Don Buffington, of Scarborough, N. Y.

Seymour Greenberg, of Chicago, seeded junior third, easily trounced Ed Brown, of Waco, Tex., 6—2, 6—0, while Jack Kramer, of Monte Bello, Calif., seeded second; Joseph Fishbach, of New York City, seeded fifth, and Richard Hainline, of Rock Island, Ill., seeded ninth, drew byes.

Second-round matches will be played tomorrow.

Wee Willie Wilkins Wires East For Expenses From Redskins

Finally Found in Richmond, Calif., 270-Pound Giant Will Be Sent Bus Fare for Trip.

Wee Willie Wilkins, 270-pound Ring Lardner character whom Coach Ray Flaherty expects to be a big help to the Redskins this season, has been found after being missing since January.

The husky redhead from St. Mary's College, was located through a telegram which he forwarded to the club office—collect, requesting bus fare to Washington from Richmond, Calif. That is, if the Skins still want him. The message ended a search that had covered the whole of southern United States, and a generous portion of Mexico.

A good-natured young fellow blessed with the strength of a mythical Paul Bunyan, Wilkins, according to Flaherty, is without doubt the strongest man he's ever seen and should make the team without difficulty. Flaherty's greatest problem, it seems, is keeping Wilkins in view for he disappears with magical ease despite his huge bulk.

Wilkins will be advanced the necessary funds to make the trip East—unless he disappears while the telegram is en route.

Steve Casey Wants New Referee

Jack Albright, the chap with the collegiate name, managing Steve Casey, shook an accusing finger at Marse Joe Turner yesterday and told the District promoter to get himself a new arbiter for Thursday night's wrestling show, or else . . .

It is a world championship bout, so-called, and since Casey will be the only man in the ring with any kind of a title at stake, Albright feels justified in trying to protect their joint interest. The manager accused Referee Benny Bortnick of giving Cliff Olson and Danno O'Mahoney "quick" counts the night Dusek pinned them. Benny, he alleges, omitted a numeral or two before grunting, "tree," and he wants to guard against a repetition of such tactics.

Mr. Albright wants a new and strictly impartial third party in the ring, preferably Willie Clark, of Philadelphia, whom Mr. Turner is endeavoring to engage.

A. A. U. Swim Meet Carded

Takoma Park Pool Will Be Scene.

Officials of the District of Columbia Amateur Athletic Union yesterday announced the opening of the 1938 swimming and diving championships. The meet, which will be held under the auspices of the National Capital Parks and the Welfare and Recreational Association, is scheduled to start on Monday, August 15 at 8 p. m., at the Takoma Park swimming pool.

A. A. U. championship medals will be awarded to all first-place winners, and team trophies, for both men and women, will be presented. Events are open to all athletes registered in the A. A. U. who reside in the District. Entries will close on August 11 at 6 p. m. at the Takoma Pool.

The following events are listed: Men's, 50-yard free style, 100-yard free style, 200-yard free style, 200-yard breaststroke, 150-yard backstroke, 300-yard medley relay, and low board diving. Women, 50-yard free style, 100-yard free style, 100-yard breaststroke, 100-yard backstroke, 150-yard medley swim, and low board diving.

ONLY THE GENERAL ELECTRIC RADIO HAS THE AMAZING NEW BEAM-A-SCOPE

NO AERIAL—NO GROUND CONNECTIONS. AT LAST A RADIO THAT OPERATES ANYWHERE—IN ANY ROOM. JUST PLUG IT IN LIKE A FLOOR LAMP.

● General Electric presents another sensational radio development—the most talked of feature of the year—the amazing new Beam-a-scope.

The G-E Beam-a-scope overcomes the necessity of "anchoring" a radio in one fixed location in the room. It eliminates the need for unsightly aerial and ground wires. It gives you a radio that can be moved at will to any position you select to suit any room scheme. More important, the Beam-a-scope reduces local static disturbances, and objectionable noises.

KEYBOARD TOUCH TUNING

Another General Electric Radio first!

● Last year G-E introduced Touch Tuning—the new 1939 G-E Radio presents another remarkable improvement—Keyboard Touch Tuning. Station keys are conveniently located on top of the cabinet.

It brings you faster—easier tuning. Swift as lightning your station is tuned at the mere touch of a key—and it stays tuned to hairline precision.

These latest G-E developments make this the year of years to buy the new radio you've planned for. Stop in soon at your nearest General Electric Radio dealer's. See and hear the most remarkable radio instruments you'll find anywhere this season.

Tunes Programs 24 Hours Ahead

The new G-E Model G-106 brings you Time Tuning. The G-E Automatic Program Pre-Selector permits you to pre-set all the programs you prefer on five different stations for 24 hours ahead. No re-tuning. No re-dialing. No more forgetting some favorite program.

Dividend Voted By Ten Home Loan Banks

77% of $1,123,600 for Half Year Will Go to U. S. Government.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Ten of the 12 Federal Home Loan Banks have declared a dividend totaling $1,123,600.23 for the semi-annual period ending June 30, Gov. Preston Delano, of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, announces, the two remaining banks declaring dividends only once a year, on December 31.

Approximately 77 per cent of the dividend goes to the United States Treasury, as the largest stockholder in the banks, Mr. Delano explains, while the remaining 23 per cent will be distributed among nearly 4,000 members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System, which hold the remainder of the stock.

The percentage of stock held by member savings and loan associations, however, is constantly rising in comparison with the Government investment, it is revealed. Statistics show that between January 1, 1934 and July 1, 1938, capital stock in the banks held by members increased from $15,428,809 to $36,771,205, or more than double.

The present declaration of dividends brings to a total of $10,296,705.52 the amount which the banks have paid to their stockholders since organization of the system in 1932. Of this amount, $8,184,586.59 has gone to the Treasury, which supplied all the original capital stock of the banks, and $2,112,118.93 to private member investors.

Meanwhile indications of a growing demand for funds by potential home buyers and builders was seen in statistics showing that during June the 12 Federal Home Loan banks made advances of $14,846,451.86 to their member institutions. This brought to a total of $446,364,315.92 the amount advanced to members since organization of the bank system. Of this cumulative amount, all but $196,224,937.36 has been repaid.

Repair Loan Demand.

A considerable demand for repair loans is reported by Washington banks, President Hilleary G. Hoskinson of the District of Columbia Bankers Association announcing continued activity in loans from local institutions under Title I of the national housing act. The association reveals that more than 1,000 of these loans have geen granted by local banks since enactment of amendments to the act last February.

It is also stated that there has been an average of approximately 40 of these loans each week. They are for repairs, alterations and modernization of property. Figures released by the District Bankers Association reflect a greatly increased demand for Title I loans in the past several weeks. Local banks have also extended numerous loans under Title II, which are referred to as insured mortgage loans under the Federal Housing Administration plan.

"Business More Cheerful."

Members of Washington Association of Credit Men have been informed by Manager Henry H. Heimann, of the National Association of Credit Men, that "business is a bit more cheerful" and "people are more hopeful." In his monthly review, he states, "there is a feeling that the worst of the depression is over, that for the time being, at least, the bottom has been reached and we have started on the way up. The principal confirmation, as well as the major factor in this changed attitude, is an unusual stock market that added 20 per cent to the Nation's equities within the short space of several weeks.

"The stock market may not be, and occasionally is not, a barometer of business conditions, but it seldom fails to be an accurate barometer of our psychological state. Unquestionably it either helps or hurts an optimistic mental state and, through this shifting process, helps or hurts business."

Auto Industry Annual.

The nearly 30,000,000 motor vehicles operating over 3,000,000 miles of highways in this country provide work for 6,000,000 persons employed in the manufacturing, selling and servicing of passenger cars and trucks, building roads and transporting people and goods, it is revealed by the 1938 Automobile Facts and Figures. This twentieth edition of the statistical annual published by the Automobile Manufacturers Association, shows that not only is the automotive industry a large buyer of many thousands of kinds of materials and products, but it is the largest customer of several leading industries.

Personal Mention.

President Francis G. Addison, jr., of Security Savings & Commercial Bank, has concluded a month's vacation at Bethany Beach, Del.

Cotton Lower; December 8.58

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—Further tired long liquidation in cotton today encountered an indifferent demand. Prices sagged to close at the lows for the day, at net losses of 11 to 14 points. December eased from 8.66 to 8.58.

The market opened 4 to 7 points lower under foreign and domestic liquidation and hedge selling. Principal source of attention was private crop reports, one of which today placed the crop at 11,546,000 bales, with condition at 69.2 per cent and yield per acre at 206.6 pounds, a slight gain over the same estimate last month.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was easier today, under increased liquidation promoted by the weakness of lard and lower cotton, and uncovering of stop-orders. Final prices were 14 to 19 points net lower. Sales, 210 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal. September closed 8.55, October 8.50, December 8.48, January 8.50, March 8.52.

Merrill Lynch & Co. Form New Firm

New York, Aug. 1.—Announcement is made that Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc., with its principal office at 40 Wall street, has been formed to succeed to the general investment business heretofore conducted by the partnership of Merrill, Lynch & Co. This firm was established in 1915 by Charles E. Merrill and the late Edmund C. Lynch.

At the same time it is announced that Cassatt & Co. Inc., in which Mr. Merrill and the late Mr. Lynch were substantial stockholders, will hereafter be operated as a subsidiary of Merrill Lynch & Co. Inc.

Corn Tumble Drives Grains To Low Levels

September Wheat Falls to 66¾, or 48 Cents Under Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 1.—Led by corn, all deliveries of major grains tumbled today to bottommost prices reached in four to five years on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Ideal weather for corn growth focused trade attention on prospects of a bumper crop of that cereal. In a selling stampede that developed as the day drew to an end, the corn market plunged downward 2½ cents a bushel, but recovered about a cent in the final transactions.

Wheat values fell a cent, and then rallied somewhat. September moved down to 66¾, where it was 26 cents under the season's high touched last February and was 48 cents below prices a year ago.

At the close, Chicago corn futures, were 1⅛-1⅜ lower compared with Saturday's finish, Sept. 55⅛-¼, Dec. 52¼-⅜, wheat ⅝-⅞ down, Sept. 66⅞-67; Dec. 68¾-⅞, oats ⅜-⅝ off, rye showing ¼-1⅜ drop, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 22 cents.

Prices Work Lower in Light Trading, Indicating Waiting Sentiment.

New York, Aug. 1.—The light volume of trading on the Stock Exchange today illustrated better than anything else that Wall street is in a waiting mood. It has seen business take a slight upward bulge, piloted by the securities market, but it is still too soon for the normal seasonal fall improvement to make itself felt. Consequently traders are ready to sit back and see whether the stock market has gone too fast or whether its bulge of the last month discounted only a portion of the improvement that may be expected.

Technicians in the street see nothing in the immediate future that can shake off this resting period. It is apparent that the street is full of sold out bulls and of traders who would like to be long of stocks but who missed the late upsurge. And the probability is that it will take some real convincing evidence in the form of business indices to attract them back into the fold. They are in no hurry and while they are in their present uncertain frame of mind they will not rush in, either on the long or short side. Something more material than hope must make its appearance, and the most convincing form that this could take would be an upward slant in the trusted indices of business. At present business is holding its own but we may have to wait a month for indications of what is to be expected this fall and winter.

Trading on the big board today amounted to only 586,510 shares, the lightest for any five-hour session since the upward movement started shortly after the middle of June. Judged by the composite average, there was a net decline in the list of 0.42 point, but there was no pressure against any particular division of stocks. The food shares were the only ones that displayed any marked degree of firmness, and in other sections fractional declines predominated. Few of the changes exceeded a point.

Business Better.

The business indices that moved ahead during July did so in most cases contra-seasonally, spurred on to some extent by the buoyancy of the stock market itself. Now that the first flush of buying has been satisfied, it will require something more than stock market action to make the barometers move ahead. The consumer goods industries were particularly responsive to the stock market action, but for business to show a convincing forward movement it will be necessary for heavier industries also to show improvement. Wall Street is not too optimistic over this prospect at this time, and it places little confidence in Government spending, but it is willing to sit by and see what the next month has to offer.

In specific stocks today, there appeared to be no unusual pressure against the Alleghany issues on announcement that the SEC has ordered an investigation of charges that the company filed false and misleading statement regarding its assets, liabilities, profits and losses. Most active issue of the day was one of the cheaper stocks, Superior Oil, which came forward on the basis of the increased interest in so-called cats and dogs.

Anaconda Active.

Motors and Chrysler were off fractions as was steel. Commercial Solvents was slightly lower and Anaconda was the most active of the metals, closing down a half point. United States Rubber was off 1¼ and General Electric a point, but most of the active favorites held their losses to small amounts.

Wheat furnished more of a sensation for the day than did securities, and all important grains went to new lows for the last four to five years. The large production of grain in the United States and Canada as well as in other important growing regions contributed to the selling. The close for wheat in Chicago was down 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents.

Bonds were irregularly lower in inactive trading on the stock exchange today. The decline was led by speculative rails and even the best carrier liens showed a soft tendency. Utility bonds were lower on the average, but trading for the most part was too uneven to indicate any definite trend. Industrials did somewhat better and a few of the foreign issues made new highs.

Trading volume on the exchange amounted to only $3,900,000 par value, compared with $9,440,000 traded a week ago. The Herald Tribune index of 30 bonds declined 0.25 point.

Among the rails which eased during the session were B. & O. first 5s, which lost 2; Big Four refunding 4s dropped 1½, and D. & H. refunding 4s lost 2. Illinois Central refunding 4s, some of the Missouri Pacific issues and Southern Railway general 4s all ended the day lower.

Among the firm spots were Atlantic Coast Line 4½s of 1964, Santa Fe generals, Katy first 4s and most of the Northern Pacific group, particularly the prior lien 4s.

In the foreign list plus signs predominated, but there were a number of right substantial losses. Adriatic Electric 7s dropped 8 points, Oriental 6s of '53 dropped 1⅜ and there were a number of fractional losses. Scattered purchases lifted a few foreign obligations to new highs, namely several Antioquian issues, Colombian 6s, Hungarian 4½s, Medellin 6½ and Kreuger & Toll certificates for the 5s of 1959.

Several industrials and utilities made new highs, including Anaconda 4½s, General Motors acceptance 3s of 1946, Phelps Dodge 3½s, Safeway Stores 4s, Shell Union 3½s, Utah Light & Traction 5s of 1944, and a number of the more active utilities on the curb exchange.

Motors Lead Stock Advance In Busy July

All Groups But Utilities Score Gains in Month's Trading.

New York, Aug. 1.—In one of the most active July stock markets on record, the value of 100 representative common stocks advanced $1,218,063,000, or 7.3 per cent, according to the monthly report issued by Frazier Jelke & Co., members of the New York Stock Exchange. Although this gain fell short of the record-breaking rise of 27.4 per cent recorded in June, nevertheless, it was one of the sharpest in years. The valuation of the stocks at the end of the month, standing at $17,842,993,000, was the highest since September, 1937, when the same stocks had a value of $19,782,287,000.

All the several groups scored advances except the utilities, which lost 7.9 per cent in the month. Motor shares featured the month's fluctuations, rising 20.3 per cent. The next largest gain was in railroad stocks, which rallied 10.1 per cent. The smallest recovery was in the food stocks, which rose only 1.5 per cent.

General Motors Votes 25 Cents

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—Directors of General Motors Corporation today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, duplicating payments in the previous two quarters. At the same time the usual preferred dividend of $1.25 a share was ordered.

Last week the company reported earnings for the quarter to June 30 equivalent to 52 cents a common share, compared with $1.48 a share in the same quarter last year.

The common dividend is payable September 12 to holders of record August 11 and the preferred November 1 to holders of record October 10.

D. C. Foursome Tied for 3d in Bridge Tourney

Dr. Connolly's Squeeze Play in National Event Aids His Team.

By the Associated Press.

Asbury Park, N. J., Aug. 1.—Dr. E. B. Connolly, Washington, bid and made three no-trump on board No. 14 by executing a squeeze and end play here this afternoon in the opening session of the National Mixed Team of Four championship, one of the seven titular events of the twelfth annual tournament of the American Contract Bridge League.

The quartet of Dr. Connolly, Miss Shirley Schwartz and Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, all of Washington, ended the first session of the event tied for third place in a field of 26 teams, winning 14 out of a possible 24 matches, leaving them three matches behind the leaders.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lemon, of Washington, who are paired with Miss Elizabeth Gair, and Samuel Fry, jr., of New York City, finished the first afternoon's play in tenth position.

Final Round Today.

Play in this championship, one of the seven national titles to be decided, will conclude with another session tomorrow afternoon.

Dr. Connolly's hand is explained below:

North—Spades A, hearts 8, 6, 4, 2, diamonds 6, 5, 3, 2, clubs K, 7, 5, 2.

West—Spades J, 7, 3, hearts K, 3, diamonds K, 10, 9, clubs Q, 10, 9, 8, 3.

East—Spades K, 10, 8, 4, hearts A, Q, J, 7, 5, diamonds A, 8, 7, clubs, 6.

South—Spades, Q, 9, 6, 5, 2, hearts 10, 9, diamonds, Q, J, 4, clubs A, J, 4.

The bidding, none vulnerable: East, one spade, South pass, West two clubs, North three no trump, South pass, West pass, North pass.

North opened the two of hearts to the king in the closed hand. Declarer returned the spade jack to singleton ace in the North hand. North returned the two of diamonds, the board ducked, South played the jack, West winning with the king.

The seven of spades was returned from the closed hand and when North showed out, Connolly won on the board with the king.

The club six was returned from the board, South unaccountably ducked, West played the ten, North winning with the king.

Hearts Force Clubs.

North, stuck for a lead, returned a heart to the ace on the board. West now reeled off three more heart tricks, forcing the club ace and jack out of the South hand, leaving this situation:

The ace of diamonds was laid down, and South thrown into the lead with the diamond eight to the queen. South then had to cash the spade queen and lead the nine of spades into the ten on the board, declarer making three no trump. At the other table, Dr. and Mrs. Steinberg defeated East's two heart bid by one trick.

Collusive Bidding On Detroit Works Charged by Ickes

Various branches of the construction industry are hampering the Public Works Administration's recovery program and jeopardizing the further grant of money in the Detroit area by putting in collusive and high bids on materials, PWA Administrator Ickes charged yesterday in a letter addressed to Mayor Richard Reading of Detroit.

A warning to the mayor is contained in these words: "In the interest of protecting PWA funds, I must warn you that so long as these practices are allowed to continue pending allotments to the City of Detroit and vicinity are placed in a state of serious jeopardy."

Ickes and his 25-year-old bride are on a trip to Alaska.

Mrs. Young was a native of Washington, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Oppenheimer, and was educated in District public schools. In 1895 she married Bernard Young, who died in 1899. She was a member of the Washington Section, National Council of Jewish Women, and Adas Israel Temple, though she had not been active in several years.

Surviving are a son, Elmer B. Young, and a daughter, Mrs. Milton Levy, of Osborn, Kans.

E. A. Tarbell, Once Corcoran Official, Dies

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Castle, N. H., Aug. 1.—Edmund Charles Tarbell, American painter who had been principal of the Corcoran School of Art in Washington, D. C., and chairman of the council of the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, died this morning at his summer home here after a two weeks' illness. He was 76.

Mr. Tarbell had been painting since he was 10, and had won many prizes for his work between 1890, when he received the Thomas B. Clarke prize at the National Academy of Design for his "Arrangement in Pink and Gray," and 1935, when he won the Grsenough prize at the Newport Art Association. His painting, "Margery and Little Edmund," was selected by vote of the public as the "best" painting in the national exhibition at the Carnegie Institute, in Pittsburgh, in 1928.

Mr. Tarbell was born in West Groton, Mass., a son of Edmund Whitney Tarbell and Mary Fernald Tarbell. When he was 19 he entered the School of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, and after three years went to Paris for two years of study in the Academie Julian under Boulanger and Lefebvre.

On his return to Boston in 1886, Mr. Tarbell sent a picture to the Society of American Artists, which secured his election to that body.

He resigned in 1898 to join the seceding body known as the Ten American Painters. There were actually 11 painters in the group, which included, besides Mr. Tarbell, Frank W. Benson, Joseph H. De Camp, Thomas W. Dewing, Childe Hassam, Willard L. Metcalfe, Robert Reid, Edward E. Simmons, J. Alden Weir, John H. Twachtman and William M. Chase.

In 1889 Mr. Tarbell became instructor of drawing and painting at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and remained there for 23 years. From 1918 to 1926 he was principal of the Corcoran School of Art in Washington.

Among the museums in which his work is represented are the Cincinnati, Ohio, and Worcester, Mass., art museums; the Corcoran Gallery in Washington, the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts, Philadelphia, and the Rhode Island School of Design, Providence.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Emiline Arnold Souther Tarbell, whom he married in 1888, and three daughters, Mrs. John L. Schaffer, of New Castle, N. H.; Mrs. Henry S. M. Clay, of Hingham, Mass., and Mrs. R. W. Ferrell, of Wheeling, W. Va., and a son, Edmund A. Tarbell, of New Castle.

Bob Burns

Says—

Sometimes I get kinda discouraged out here in Hollywood tryin' to act like I know which fork to use and how to read French menus and all that. It sure is wearin' on a fella. I like things homey and natural like they are down home. For instance like they are at the Van Buren Wholesome Eatery where my Uncle Hod is a waiter.

Last time I was in there I called Uncle Hod over and says "Where's the menu?" He says "We don't have any, but there's vegetable soup, beef stew, fried sole, corned beef and cabbage, spaghetti and a small steak." I says "My goodness—how do you memorize all that?" and Uncle Hod said "I don't memorize nothin'—I just look at the tablecloth."

Prince Georges Airport Seeks to Bar WOL Aerial

Contend Erection of Two Radio Towers by Field Breaks 1937 Law.

The Circuit Court for Prince Georges County has been asked to issue an injunction against the American Broadcasting Co., Inc., to prevent erection of two WOL transmitting towers adjacent to the Queens Chapel Airport, near the intersection of Queens Chapel and Ager roads, it was revealed yesterday.

The petition for the injunction was filed by W. Carroll Beatty, Hyattsville attorney representing William M. Henderson and Robert S. Baber, operators of the airport. Counsel for the broadcasting company have been given until today to answer a rule to show cause why the injunction should not be issued. A hearing is set for Thursday.

Owners of the airport, which was licensed by the State Aviation Commission a year ago, contend the broadcasting company failed to comply with a law passed by the 1937 Legislature regulating the height of buildings and other structures near public landing fields.

The suit avers that erection of the towers will interfere with continued operation of the airport, because they would be in direct line with the runways.

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Labor Board Cites Virginia Ferry Company

Orders Firm to Disband Employe Unit; Cease Anti-Union Activity.

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board ordered the Virginia Ferry Corporation at Norfolk yesterday to disband what the board found was a company-dominated committee of employe representatives, and to cease interfering with the collective bargaining rights of its workers.

Charges that the firm, which operates two ferries across Chesapeake Bay between Cape Charles and Little Creek, Va., had discharged three men because of union activities were dismissed by the board for lack of substantiation.

The board said company officials sought to discourage their deck crews from joining the International Seamen's Union (A. F. L.) and that the firm had dominated and interfered with formation of the employe-representation committee and contributed to its support.

The committee was formed before the I. S. U. began its organization work and the board said the rapid enlistment of the company's unlicensed personnel indicated their dissatisfaction with the company committee.

Statements by Capt. Thomas J. Stone, senior captain of the line, and Edward F. Railsback, general superintendent, against the I. S. U. were called unfair labor practices.

Stone called his men on deck and told them he "would not work a union crew," the board said, and Railsback urged the men not to be "fooled by outsiders. We have treated you right and are still going to treat you right."

Hines Jury Panel Includes Belmont, G. F. Rittenhouse

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—The names of 300 persons—including such prominent men as Morgan Belmont, banker, and George F. Rittenhouse, publisher—were drawn today in the "blue ribbon" jury panel for the trial of James J. Hines, erstwhile powerful Tammany boss, indicted as a policy rackets conspirator. A carpenter and a plumber also were among those picked.

Hines and Martin Weintraub, indicted with J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, disbarred attorney, and others for conspiracy and conduct of the policy racket, the prosecution says, was once controlled by the late "Dutch Schultz" (Arthur Flegenheimer), gangster, are to go to trial August 15.

Davis was paroled from the Tombs Saturday in custody of District Attorney Dewey after promising to plead guilty and turn State's evidence.

Forest Fire Peril Past at Navy Yard

Seattle, Aug. 1 (AP).—The wind shifted into the North today to save the Bremerton City watershed from a forest fire which raged to within 7 miles of the Puget Sound Navy Yard city last night.

Public Works Commissioner C. C. Casad said the blaze virtually was under control and that, unless the wind shifted to the South again and increased in velocity, he believed most of the danger was past.

3 Men Die as Plane Hits Trees, Burns

Baxley, Ga., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Three men were killed when the airplane in which they were flying to Atlanta crashed in a clump of trees soon after taking off here late today and burned. They were Pilot Alton T. Ballard, 27, of Eastern Air Lines, Atlanta; Charles Hammett, Atlanta, and Walter Leggett, Baxley.

Coal Firms Lose Fight for Secrecy On Cost Reports

Eight coal companies, chiefly in West Virginia, yesterday lost appeals from decisions of the Bituminous Coal Commission which would reveal their individual cost reports, when the United States Court of Appeals held they had failed to "exhaust administrative remedies" before going to the courts for help.

The Mallory Coal Co., the Atlantic Smokeless Coal Co., the Ashland Coal and Coke Co., and five others asked that a commission order of July 15, denying a rehearing on a prior order relating to coal costs, be set aside. The commission indicated it would make producers costs public after March 20.

The court refused to review the commission's ruling on the ground it lacked jurisdiction and held the order was in "preliminary" rather than "final" form and therefore not appealable. It suggested the producers and the commission agree on a final form suitable for judicial review.

Robert W. Knox, general counsel for the commission, argued before the court in June that all interested parties be given access to cost reports of the companies to test the accuracy of composite reports prepared by the commission. The commission's order authorized public examination of company costs to aid in establishing a minimum price scale.

'Inventor' Guilty Of False Pretense

Hobart R. Everett, self-styled "inventor" of a revolutionary cellophane process, pleaded guilty in Police Court yesterday to four charges of false pretenses. He will receive sentence Monday.

Everett was arrested after "borrowing" small sums from patent attorneys on the basis of returns he anticipated from a process for "stiffening cellophane into tin." Officials of the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. said they knew nothing of a letter of indorsement Everett showed.

Two of six charges against him were nolle prossed. He admitted obtaining $5 each from C. Calvert Hines, John B. Dickman, Royal E. Burnham and Clarence A. Bateman.

Strip-Tease Ruins Gang of 8 Bandits

Edwardsville, Ill., Aug. 1 (AP).—A slender 27-year-old divorcee and seven men who "had a lot of fun while it lasted" told today of careers in crime brought to an end by a "strip tease" holdup technique.

The rueful "while it lasted" remark was attributed to Mrs. Meryl Walker, of Litchfield, Ill., by Sheriff Simon Henry, who claimed confessions from the entire "gang."

Recently several holdups have been reported in which occupants of automobiles were forced to disrobe. Last week a woman victim recognized one of the robbers and the "strip tease gang roundup" followed. All eight under arrest face charges of armed robbery.

Quintuplet Kittens Plane Stowaways

St. Louis, Aug. 1 (AP).—Five feline stowaways on a Chicago and Southern plane en route from New Orleans to Chicago were "grounded" here tonight, but will be "deadheaded back to home and mother in Jackson, Miss., tomorrow.

The five kittens—identical month-old offsprings of Zero, the Jackson Airport's cat mascot—were quintuplets at birth and are named after the Dionne quintuplets. Tiny nameplates provided identification. Pilot Leland Anderson said the five had either crawled or been carried into the plane during a brief stop at Jackson.

Four File Answers To Martin Charges

Detroit, Aug. 1 (AP).—Four suspended vice presidents of the United Automobile Workers filed their formal answer today to charges preferred against them by Homer Martin, denying all allegations and making charges of their own.

The defendants are Richard T. Frankensteen, Walter N. Wells, Syndham Mortimer and Ed Hall. Their trial before the union's executive board will be resumed Saturday.

News of Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris.

Washington's newest bright spot will be the "Hour Glass," next door to the Trans-Lux Theater. It will be operated by Vincent Gallegher, manager of the King Cole Room.

With luck on working schedules, the "Hour Glass" will open Monday, Aug. 15, certainly not more than a couple of days later. It has been designed by the Joseph Urban Associates, of New York. Both food and drinks will be served and the chef will be Hans Lube of Philadelphia, a master of Viennese cuisine.

Wednesday will be "Vaughn De Leath Night" at the Mayfair. But, regardless, Perry Martin (in whose career Miss De Leath has taken much interest) will sing Vaughn's songs including her famous "Heigh-Ho, Silver;" also her newest song, as yet unnamed.

Going Ringling on us is the Shoreham Terrace. The Flying Sensations, trapezists, made their debut on the Terrace last night. There were three daring young men and one daring young lady. Also in the new Terrace show are that upstage ballroom dancing duo, Wardell and Dade and dancer Muriel Thomas.

Barnee is playing the lovely and strange "King's Serenade," a bit of authentic Hawaiian music brought to him by Miss Corinne Griffith (Mrs. George Marshall) after her sojourn in the South Seas.

Dick Richards, who introduced "Big Apple" contests in this area, has blossomed out with a new one. He will open Pine Grove, dine-and-dance spot on the Mt. Vernon Boulevard, next Friday. "Red" Pyle's orchestra with singer Jerry Ralston will offer swing-some dance music. Also there'll be floor shows on Friday and Saturday evenings. Chicken dinners will be starred on the menu.

Carl Mainford, Washington amateur magician, stepped into the professional spotlight at Bamboo Gardens this evening. New, too, at Bamboo are the tapster team, Newton and Gaylord, said to be too good. Holdovers are adagioteers La Rue and Carroll. Sweet dance music by the Bamboo Reyellers.

Glen Echo last night was a composite of Mardi-Gras, "Old Home Week" and a dancers' convention. Dave McWilliams is back with a bigger band than ever before. "Mac" has played at Glen Echo for 11 consecutive seasons. He and his music are as much a part of Glen Echo as the merry-go-round. The McWilliams music is styled, rhythmed and swung just to suit the young Glen Echo dancing crowd.

At the Lotus a new line of Chester Daugherty lovelies have stepped into the spotlight. Also, singer Marion Dawn, always a favorite, has returned. The juggler-acrobat-equilibrist, Chester Dolphin, will remain for another week. We understand he's a holdover wherever he goes. Another attraction will be Journet and Severin.

MUSICAL NOTES (Off-Side):

"Tiny" Meeker (Powhatan Roof) learned to play bass just by watching other bass players.

Johnny Shaw (Madrillon) has garden trouble. That is, Mrs. Shaw tries to get him to work in the garden. But even the thought of raising fresh vegetables fatigues him. "I'll live on steak and sleep in the sun," says Johnny, lying down in his uncultivated garden.

But a model gardener is Harold Veo, leader of the Mayflower Lounge Orchestra. He's a flower fancier and you should see the dahlias and gladioli he raises at his Cleveland Park home.

Notice. The right way to spell the first name of violinist Bowersox (Rainbow Room) is Durward. It seems his mother named him after the hero of "Lena Rivers."

Jack Angell, leader of the Hi-Hat String Swingsters, is sensitive about that last "l" being left off his name. "I wouldn't mind it if I played a harp," he says.

Biggest menu you'll ever see is at Brinkley's. It's about a yard square and a mile long, carrying both food and beverage items. Many restaurant men have asked for copies of the menu with the idea of adopting its style.

For a cool ride and a happy landing, try:

Show Boat, out on the Baltimore Boulevard. A fine German chef, hot breads and hotter music by the Three Dees.

Hull Eulogy Stirs Talk of 1940 Race

By the United Press.

Stanley K. Hornbeck, one of the State Department's advisers on international political relations, reviewed the Administration's foreign policy in an address over the National Broadcasting Co. system last night and concluded with an eulogy of Secretary Hull, whom he called a man without an enemy.

The eulogy served to recall that Hull is receiving increasing mention as possible Democratic Presidential timber in 1940.

Press Club Secretary Has Appendix Removed

Felix Cotton, formerly a member of The Washington Post staff, had his appendix removed at Garfield Hospital yesterday. He was reported to be "doing well." Cotton is secretary of the National Press Club and lives with his family at 2005 Key boulevard, Arlington, Va.

Pennsylvania Railroad Revives 10,000 Jobs

Altoona, Pa., Aug. 1 (AP).—The Pennsylvania Railroad's shop whistles today tooted a merry greeting—the first in eight months—as the vanguard of some 10,000 workers began trickling back to their jobs to share in a $8,321,000 building program. Included in the building program is the construction of 20 electric locomotives and 1,000 freight cars.

Loyalists Aide Gets Bond In Gold Smuggling Case

Tampa, Fla., Aug. 1 (U.P.).—Fernando Bunuel, member of the publicity committee for loyalist Spain, was released under $2,500 bond late today on charges of attempting to smuggle in 80 gold coins, 21 pieces of jewelry and three Spanish shawls when he entered this country at Key West last month.

W.C.T.U. to Hit Cocktails With 'Fruit Juice Hours'

San Francisco, Aug. 1 (AP).—Delegates to the sixty-fourth national convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union will meet for "fruit juice hours" each day after the convention opens here Thursday. This daily "hour" is planned as a suggestion to replace "cocktail hours."
